SCENE AT DOCKS AS BIG CUNADER CARPATHIA ARRIVED LAST NIGHT WITH BUT SEVEN HUNDRED AND FORTY. FIVE SURVIVORS—BEGGAR'S DESCRIPTION—TALES OF BRAVERY TOLD.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

New York, April 19.—The Titanic disaster, as written into history today by many of the 745 survivors, accounts for the loss of 1,589 persons at sea off the Newfoundland Banks early Monday morning and the subsequent death of six persons who had been rescued, bringing the total of lives lost up to 1,595. These officials magnify greatly the figures and estimates which had come by wireless, and the stories which survivors tell make certain what had already been judged from the meager wireless reports, that the disaster is the greatest that ocean travel has ever known.

The big facts which came to the surface in the flood of narratives are that 1,601 persons met their death; that there is hardly the shadow of a hope that this grand total will be curtailed by a single additional survivor; that several men of wealth and world-wide prominence are, as had been feared for several days, among those who perished; that practically the only women who were not saved were those who chose to die with their husbands; that nearly all of the survivors saw the Titanic sink and heard the music of the orchestra playing "Nearer My God to Thee," mingling with the shrieks of the drowning as the vessel sank in 2,000 fathoms of water.

The Titanic struck an iceberg about 90 feet high which ripped the liner's sides open and made the water-tight compartments useless, and while the vessel was gradually sinking the icy water reached her steaming boilers causing an explosion, which sent her to the bottom.

Among the hundreds on her decks to the last were Colonel John Jacob Astor and Major Archibald Butt, Benjamin Guggenheim, Jacques Patelle, George D. Widener, Henry B. Harris, and scores of others. Isidore Strauss was among them also, with Mrs. Strauss, who refused to leave her husband behind when she had the opportunity to save herself.

Major Butt, with an iron bar in his hand, is said to have stood at the stern of the ship and defended women and children from the maddened men. Col. Astor also is said to have met his fate bravely after seeing his bride to a lifeboat drawing aside to watch other women to safety and awaiting his own fate.

It was only because the maximum capacity of the steamer's lifeboats was barely a third the complement of the ship, in crew and passengers that hundreds of despairing passengers had to be left to their fate. J. Bruce Ismay is said by some of the passengers to have been one of the first to get into the lifeboats, but this is denied by Mr. Ismay himself. Stunned by the immensity of the tragedy he had little to say except that he had heard of the investigation which the United States Senate had begun and expressed his full willingness to assist the Senate committee in its inquiry.

He agreed to appear before the committee in this city today. The surviving passengers are unanimous that the "unbelievable" happened. The voyage had been pleasant and uneventful. The Titanic had been making good time, and all accounts agree that on the night of the disaster she was apparently going at her usual rate of from 21 to 23 knots an hour. Quartermaster Moody, who was at the helm, said that the ship was making 21 knots and that the officers were under orders at the time to keep up speed in the hope of making a record passage.

New York, April 19.—How the White Star liner Titanic, the largest ship afloat south of the Grand Banks, of New Southland on Monday morning, last carrying to their death 1,601 of the 2,204 persons aboard, was told to the world in all its awful details for the first time with the arrival in New York of the Cunard liner Carpathia bearing the exhausted survivors of the catastrophe. Of the great facts that stand out from the chaotic accounts of the tragedy, these are the most salient:

The death list has been increased rather than decreased. Six persons died after being rescued.

The list of prominent persons lost stands as previously reported.

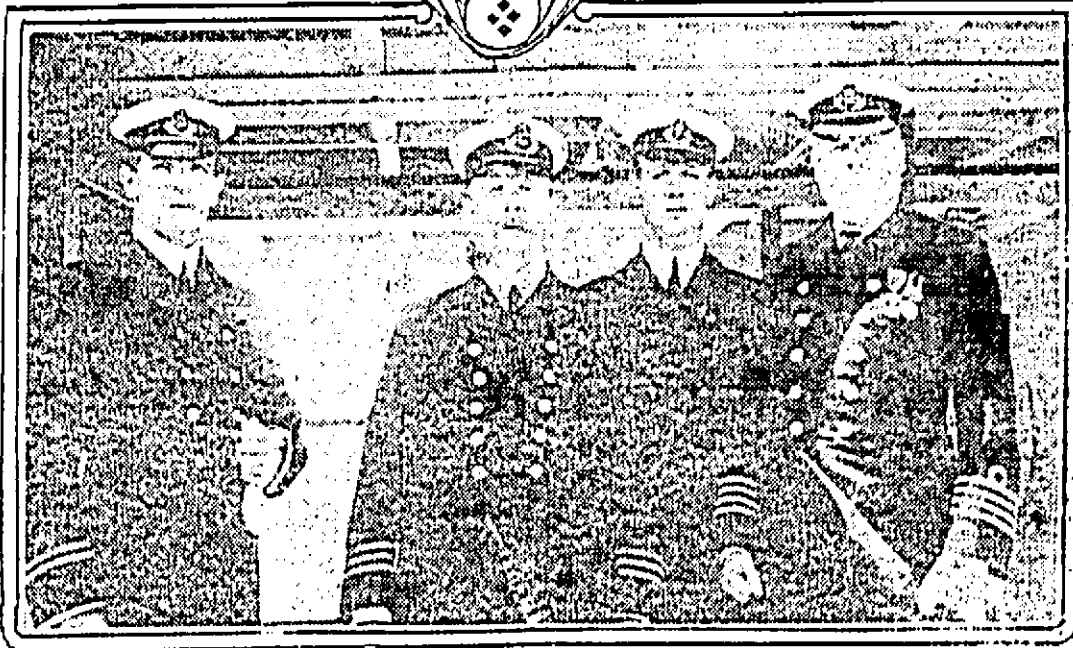

Practically every woman and child with the exception of those women who refused to leave their husbands, was saved.

The survivors on the lifeboats saw the lights on the stricken vessel glimmer to the last, heard her band playing and saw the doomed hundreds on her deck and heard their groans and cries when the vessel sank.

Accounts vary as to the extent of the disaster on board.

Not only was the Titanic tearing through the April night to her doom with every ounce of steam crowded on, but she was under orders from the general officers of the line to make all the speed of which she was capable. This was the statement made tonight by J. J. Moody, a quartermaster of the vessel and helmsman on the night of the disaster. He said the ship was making 21 knots an hour and the officers were striving to live up to the orders to smash the record.

OWNER OF TITANIC TELLS HIS STORY OF AWFUL DISASTER TO COMMITTEE

J. Bruce Ismay Recounted Fate of Liner to Investigating Committee Today.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

New York, April 19.—The story of how the Titanic met its fate was told today to the U. S. investigating committee into the Titanic disaster by J. Bruce Ismay, managing director of the White Star line. The details of the story were drawn out by Senator William Alden Smith, chairman of the special sub-committee charged with the examination of witnesses and Senator Newlands the other senator who came to New York to conduct the inquiry.

When asked the circumstances under which he left the boat, Mr. Ismay replied almost in a whisper: "One of the boats were being filled. Officers called out to know if there were any more women to go. There were none. No passengers were on the deck as the boat was being lowered I got into it."

"Senator Smith began to ask the witness to detail his experience on the Titanic, Mr. Ismay interrupted. Then Mr. Ismay said he desired to express his sincere grief at the catastrophe and to welcome the fullest inquiry. "Kindly tell the committee all the circumstances surrounding your voyage," insisted Senator Smith. "Tell it as fully as possible beginning with your boarding the vessel at Liverpool your place on the ship and as many circumstances as possible to help this committee."

"First I wish to say that I court the fullest inquiry," said Mr. Ismay. "This awful catastrophe I must say at the outset I greatly deplore. I have nothing to conceal, nothing to hide. The boat left Belfast I think the first of April. She underwent her trial safely and arrived at Southampton, Wednesday, the 3rd of April I think. She sailed Wednesday, April 10, leaving Southampton at 12 o'clock noon. That evening the Titanic reached Cherbourg having run at about 48 revolutions we arrived at Queenstown Thursday noon. The Titanic was then running at 10 revolutions. The first day I think we made about 47 miles.

"The next day we increased the speed to 72 revolutions and I think we ran 519 miles. The next day we increased to 75 revolutions and ran about 516 to 519 miles. The needful took place on Sunday night.

"The exact time I do not know because I was asleep. The ship sank I am told at 2:30. I understand you have been told that the Titanic was running at full speed. It never had run at full speed. She was built to go 80 revolutions and never had been speeded up to that.

"We never had all her boilers working. It was our intention to speed the boat up to her full quota Tuesday, but the catastrophe came to prevent it."

Senator Smith asked Mr. Ismay if he sought to send any wireless messages from the Titanic after she had struck. He said not. Turning to the subject of lifeboats, Mr. Ismay said he heard the captain give the order to lower the boats.

"I then left the bridge," he added, "and he said he saw lowered and filled. In his own boat were four members of the crew and 45 passengers."

"Was there any jostling or attempt by men to get into the boats," asked Senator Smith.

"I saw none."

"How were the women selected?" "We picked the women and children as they stood nearest the rails."

Representative Hughes handed Senator Smith a note and then the chairman told Mr. Ismay that it was reported that the second lifeboat left without its full complement of persons and from 11:30 until 7:30 women were forced to row the boat.

"I know nothing about it."

Representative Hughes' daughter was in the boat and was assigned to watch the work in the boat and if it came out to use her finger as a stopper. Mr. Ismay was asked how long he remained on the injured ship.

"That would be hard to estimate," he responded. "Almost until she sank. Probably an hour and a quarter."

"Did you see the Titanic sink?"

"I did not see the Titanic go down," Mr. Ismay said shaking his head mournfully. "I did not want to see her go down. I was rowing in the lifeboat all the time until we were picked up. I turned back only once after we left the vessel I saw her green lights and never turned back again. I did not want to see the end."

As a final question to his examination, Mr. Ismay was asked what he had on when he got into the lifeboat. "A pair of slippers, a pair of pajamas, a suit of clothes and an overcoat," he replied. Mr. Ismay was asked to hold himself in readiness to during the day for another call before the committee.

Senator Smith announced it was desired to hear the captain of the Carpathia in the morning. Captain Rose, train of the Carpathia followed Mr. Ismay to the Carpathia. Mr. Ismay had been captain of the Carpathia since last January, but that he had been a seaman for 27 years. The lifeboats on the Titanic, Captain Rose said.

"All were new and in accordance with the British regulation. He saw only one body floating in the ocean. The car cruised around the scene of the disaster more than half an hour having arrived an hour and a half after the Titanic sank.

"The last message from the Titanic," said the captain, "was engine room nearly full of water. I answered that I was rushing to her aid; 'expect to reach your position about 4:30.' I flashed back."

"Was the Titanic on her right course when she first spoke to you?" Senator Smith asked.

"Absolutely on her regular course bound for New York," said the Carpathia captain.

"She was in what we call the southern course to avoid icebergs."

"Do you think the route is a practical one?"

"Quite so but this is a notable exception."

SENATOR MAKES BITTER ATTACK ON J. D. IMSAY

Senator Rayner in Senate Today Says Captain of Ill-Fated Titanic Probably Acted Under Director's Order.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Washington, April 19.—Senator Rayner, Maryland, in the senate today bitterly attacked J. Bruce Ismay, managing director of the White Star line. He said the captain of the Titanic undoubtedly acted under orders of Mr. Ismay, who, he declared, "risked the lives of the entire ship to make a speedy passage across the sea."

Senator Rayner asserted that Mr. Ismay should be held responsible for the disaster and declared that the civilized nations would applaud criminal prosecution of the management of the line.

OCEAN TRAVELERS NOT FRIGHTENED BY DISASTER TO THE ILL-FATED TITANIC

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

New York, April 19.—Demand for trans-Atlantic transportation has shown little or no diminution notwithstanding the disaster to the Titanic. Travelers who had made reservations on the lost vessel for her proposed eastern trip on Saturday, arranged with the International Mercantile Marine company for a substitute, sailing on Saturday, will take some of those who had booked on the Titanic. Other lines have profited by the loss of the Titanic.

The Cincinnati, scheduled to leave on Saturday for Hamburg, has had many additions to her passenger list in all that she is a comparatively slow steamer. The demand for accommodations aboard her.

Washington, April 19.—Formal tribute to the Titanic dead was paid by the house of representatives today when at 12:11 it adjourned until noon tomorrow. The senate remained in session under an agreement reached yesterday for a vote before adjournment on the Dillingham general immigration bill.

MAJ. BUTT DEEPLY MOURNED BY TAFT

President's Aide, Lost With Titanic, Eulogized in High Terms By Him.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Washington, April 19.—With all hope for the rescue of Major Butt abandoned, President Taft today issued a statement showing the high regard in which he held him.

"Major Archibald Butt was my military aide. He was like a member of my family and I feel his loss as if it were my own. The chief trait of his loyal character was loyalty to his ideals, his cross and his friends. His character was a simple one in the sense that he was incapable of hypocrisy or insincerity. He was gentle and considerate to every one, high and low. He never lost his sense of proper regard to what he considered the respect due to constituted authority. He was an earnest member of the Episcopal church and loved that communion. He was a soldier every inch of him, and a devotee of his profession."

Tributes to Major Butt continued to pour into the White House today.

GOVERNMENT MAY TAKE STEPS FOR THE REGULATION OF WIRELESS STATIONS.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Washington, April 19.—The government's inability to get early information regarding the loss of the Titanic through the wireless outfit of the recent cruiser Chester and Salem or through shore stations has confirmed the naval shore stations has confirmed to press for legislation by congress, which will enable the government to assert control over all agencies whether private or corporate which may seek to restrain or interfere with the government officials in such cases as this.

SURVIVORS NEARING HOME AFTER THEIR EXPERIENCES.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Green Bay, April 19.—Dr. John Minahan wired he would leave New York city at four o'clock this afternoon with Mrs. W. A. Minahan of Fond du Lac and Miss Daisy Minahan, enroute for Green Bay. They expected to arrive in Chicago at 8:30 Saturday night. The telegram conveyed the impression that the women are in fairly good health or he would not allow them to travel. He says there is no hope for Dr. W. A. Minahan.

Mr. George Graham, of Winnipeg, who is believed to have been lost in the Titanic wreck, is a nephew of Mrs. Fred Wilson, of this city. She received a message from Mrs. Graham this morning. Mrs. Graham had gotten as far as Toronto, when she learned her husband was not among the survivors.

SLOGAN "BE BRITISH" AIDED IN THE WORK OF SAILORS.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

New York, April 19.—But for the unparalleled self sacrifice and heroism of Captain Smith and the Titanic officers the sea would have claimed an even greater toll when the giant ship went down. From the bridge, Captain Smith called through his megaphone: "Be British," and that became the rallying cry of officers and crew. Such was the graphic description of the conduct of the men responsible for the saving of human souls on the smitten Titanic as told today by John Johnson a member of the crew who took an oar in a life boat.

HOW COL. JOHN JACOB ASTOR MET HIS DEATH

MANY DIED OF EXPOSURE—OTHERS DROWNED IN THE SEA WHILE SOME SANK WITH THE BOAT NEVER TO RISE AGAIN, AS THE CARPATHIA APPROACHED.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

New York, April 19.—Col. Archibald Gracie, United States Army, who jumped from the top-most deck of the Titanic as she sank and swam about and landed on a raft and helped others as they jumped into the water, added today to his statement of last night:

"The Titanic was struck by the berg on her port side," Col. Gracie said. "She was ripped from near the middle boat to the bow after the fashion of a can-opener opening a box of sardines. The compartments were closed immediately as far as possible under the circumstances."

"The interval between the collision and the sinking of the ship was two hours and twenty-two minutes, timed by my watch which lay open on the dresser. The watch stopped at 2:22 a. m.; when I jumped into the water. I was awakened in my cabin at midnight."

"After sinking with the ship it appeared to me as if I were propelled by some great force through the water. This might have been occasioned by an explosion under the water. I recall that I was most fearful of being boiled to death. The second officer, who was on the top deck, told me he had a similar experience."

"Innumerable thoughts of a personal nature flashed through my brain. Again and again I prayed for deliverance although I felt sure that the end had come. My greatest difficulty was in holding my breath until I came to the surface. I reached the surface after a time that seemed unending. There was nothing in sight save the lee which dotted the ocean and a large field of wreckage. There were dying men and women all about me, groaning and crying piteously."

"The second officer and J. B. Thayer, Jr., who were swimming near, told me that just before my head appeared above the water, one of the Titanic's funnels separated and fell apart near me, scattering the bodies in the water. We said the Lord's Prayer again and again together."

"An age seemed to have passed when we first saw the twinkling lights of the Carpathia. We knew her and recognized her as our rescuer. The Marconi operator—one of the thirty-five on the raft—confirmed our hopes by saying that he, too, knew it was the Carpathia. While we looked someone whispered that there was also a ship behind us. We dared not turn about to look so fearful were we that the balance would be overcome."

The second officer finally ordered one man to look behind. The slipping of one man would have meant the death, probably, of all of us. The man who looked passed the word that there was no ship behind."

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

New York, April 19.—One version of the death of Jacob Astor and William T. Stead was told by Philip Mook who with his sister, Mrs. Paul Schabert, were among the survivors. "Many men were hanging on to rats in the sea," said Mr. Mook. "V. M. T. Stead, the author and Colonel Jacob Astor, clung to a raft. Their feet became frozen and they were compelled to release their hold, both were drowned."

Four Buried.

According to a surgeon of the New York hospital who went aboard the Carpathia after she docked, four bodies were buried at sea from that steamer. The chief steward of the Carpathia explained the large number of the crew saved by saying that the majority of them had jumped from the Titanic and were picked up by the boats.

Is Exhausted.

Captain A. H. Rostran of the Carpathia was in a state of great exhaustion last night when the steamer arrived here in fast recovering today and will soon be able to give a detailed account of the rescue of the passengers of the Titanic. When asked for a statement Captain Rostran said: "I am all done up and can't say a word. I should like very much to do so, but orders to me and to the rest of the ship's company make any statement from me absolutely impossible at this time. The statement will come later."

The First S. O. S.

The story of the Carpathia's rescue begins with the receipt of the Titanic S. O. S. early Sunday morning. The passengers realized at once that there was something wrong when they were awakened from their sleep by the noise made by the crew in knocking blocks away from life boats. They also knew the ship had put about because of the sudden drop in temperature.

Stuck to Post.

Phillips the first Marconi operator aboard the Titanic stuck to his post until the last, jumped from the sinking ship, was taken aboard the life raft and died before rescuers reached him, according to a story told here today by Thomas Whitely who was a waiter in the saloon of the Titanic. Whitely is in St. Vincent's hospital suffering from a fractured leg and numerous bruises.

Cabled Story.

Three French survivors Fernand A. Oumont, Pierre Marechal, son of the well known French admiral and Paul Chevre, the sculptor cable jointly to the Marlin, a graphic narrative of the rescue to the Titanic in which they repeatedly insist that more lives could have been saved if the passengers had not dogged faith that the Titanic was unsinkable.

Boats Not Full.

Several boats, they declared would have carried double the number. The three Frenchmen say they were playing bridge with a Mr. Smith of Philadelphia, when a great crunching noise of ice packed up against the port holes. As they rushed on deck there was much confusion but this quickly died down. One of the officers when questioned by a woman humorously replied, "Do not be afraid. We are merely cutting our way out."

Captain Nervous.

Presently the captain appeared to become somewhat nervous and ordered all to put their life preservers on. The boats were then lowered, but only a few people stirred and several of the boats put off half empty, one with only 15 persons in it when the Frenchmen's boat rowed off for half a mile the Titanic presented a fairly life picture, illuminated from stem to stern.

The Sinking.

Then suddenly the lights began to go out and the steamer reared up high in the air. An immense clamor rose on all sides and during the hour unquenchable cries rang out. It was like a great chorus chanting a refrain of death with wild obstinacy. Sometimes the cries died away and then the tragic chorus began again more terrible and more despairing.

Heard Cries.

The narrative continues "The cries pursued and hunted us as we pulled away in the night. Then one by one the cries ceased and only the noise of the sea remained. The Titanic was engulfed almost without a murmur. Her story quivered in a final spasm and then disappeared."

All Suffered.

The Frenchmen and their companion suffered bitterly from the cold. They cried out to attract attention and a German baron who was with them emptied his revolver into the air. When finally the Carpathia appeared a feeble cheer went up from the boats every one of which moved as swiftly as possible toward the liner.

Tragic Incidents.

The Frenchmen related tragic incidents as they were leaving the sides of the Titanic. After all the ships' boats had been launched some of the passengers who had stayed behind long tried to embark on a collapsible raft which worked badly. Fifty persons climbed onto the raft which half filled with water.

Were Drowned.

One after another the passengers on the raft were drowned or perished with the cold. When a corpse was found in the way it was thrown overboard and only 15 to 20 who had taken refuge on the raft were saved by the Carpathia.

Crew Drilled.

Col. Astor and many of the others were superbly heroic and the crew of the Titanic with sublime abnegation fulfilled its duties to humanity."

THE TENDENCY OF EVERY MAN IS TO LIVE UP TO HIS NAME

By J. R. HAMILTON.
Former Advertising Manager of Wanamaker's, Philadelphia.

Wherever you find a good name you will find a man TRYING to live up to it. Character follows reputation FAR MORE QUICKLY than reputation follows character. No one ever lost his good name except through FOLLY.

What the world THINKS of a man is the best MORAL TONIC that is sold under the label of philosophy.

And it is the same with MERCHANDISE as it is with MEN. The NAMELESS thing is dreaded everywhere, while the thing with a GOOD NAME USUALLY good because you EXPECT it to be.

Men grow PROUD of their products. You will find a manufacturer saying "This shoe has GOT to be good because it bears MY name." You will find a canner saying, "I cannot USE any more than I can TELL a lie." You will find a clothing manufacturer saying "If I am all wool, my clothing must also be ALL WOOL."

And so it goes with every single product that carries a BRAND or a NAME. Whenever a man sets a standard, he STRIVES to live up to it; and whenever the WORLD sets that standard, he DOUBLES the effort.

Which simply means, if you WANT the best, you must ASK for the best. And every time you ASK, you make it BETTER.

There is hardly one of you readers who does not know the name of EVERY GOOD PRODUCT on the market. From clothing to sugar and from hosiery to baking powder SOME GOOD NAME is indelibly fixed in your mind, yet, when you ASK for an article, most of the time you do not USE THAT NAME.

And every time you FAIL to do so, you DISCOURAGE the maker, you LOWER the standard for yourself and you allow some INFERIOR thing to gain in strength and capacity.

Let this go home in your minds: YOU set the standard of merchandise. The maker follows YOUR through YOUR loyalty. Whenever you ask for ANY OLD THING, you get it.

While you are reading the ADVERTISING NEWS in this paper today, make up your mind to ask only for what you know to be good; to LEARN what is best and DEMAND it and to have no parley with the NAMELESS things of trade.

Child's Last Earthly Vision.

Some mysterious revelation of the unseen as well as an indescribable pathos were contained in the last words of a little girl, upon whom an inquest was held at Gillingham, Kent, England, recently. The child was ten, an age when the child-mind often has strange qualities for probing into the mystic. A witness related that she cried out, just before falling dead, "Look, mamma; it is over there."

TURKEY IN WAR TIME

Scenes in Constantinople When Italy Begun Hostilities.

Christians Feared Massacre, but Government Held Fanatics Firmly in Check—Big Wave of Patriotism Is Shown.

Chicago.—The Daily News publishes the following dispatch from its Constantinople correspondent:

The news of the declaration of war, though not unexpected, fell like a bombshell on the people of the historic capital on the shores of the Bosphorus.

Crowds gathered here and there awaiting developments. Turbanned "hodjas" with white flowing beards, murmured curses on the infidels who dared threaten the children of the prophet. News vendors shouted at the top of their voices the latest extras of the enterprising newspapers, and cafes and mosques were filled with politicians discussing the news and proposing immediate action. It is a curious phenomenon that a Turkish crowd at such critical moments always thinks of one thing, the massacre of Christians. Demonstrations were proposed and immediate expulsion of Italians demanded. It may be said, however, that the government took immediate precautions and patrols of police and gendarmes were stationed everywhere to prevent any rash action by the irresponsible crowds.

On the European side of the town the impressions were different. The native Armenians and the Greeks were apprehensive and expected an attack by Kurdish "hamals" (carriers) on the Christian quarters at any moment. Native Christians have seen so much bloodshed in this capital that it seems natural to expect violence at such a time. The cafes were full of correspondents, members of various foreign embassies, local officials, merchants and others. Rumors of all kinds were in circulation. Some suggested that the native houses should be protected by American, English or French flags, while others suggested that every one should be armed. There was a rush to the shops of dealers in small arms and extravagant prices were asked for revolvers of a very inferior quality.

The position, it may be said, would not have been so grave had it not been for the resignation of the cabinet and the inability of Said Pasha to form another. The country seemed practically without a government for a few days. It was this undecided state of affairs that caused the intense excitement which was increased by rumors that the Ottoman fleet had been destroyed by the Italians.

However, the belated formation of a cabinet had a quieting effect on public opinion and fear and indecision disappeared.

After receiving news of the safety of the Ottoman fleet people began thinking of collecting money for more warships. Voluntary subscriptions poured in from all sorts and conditions of people. Turkish women brought in their gold ornaments, diamond rings and bracelets. Patriotism among orientals is expressed sometimes in such a spontaneous manner that the average European cannot comprehend it. The patriotic feeling of the Turk is chiefly based on religious feelings and instincts. He does not sacrifice everything for his country so much as to safeguard his religion; it is this feeling that is so widespread among the Moslems of the world.

It is this religious union which has brought together all Mohammedans of whatever nationality. One often hears of the significant threats of the Moslem regarding the "dijahad" or the "holy war." Any one who has resided sufficiently long in Moslem countries appreciates the fact that a "holy war" is not an improbable thing.

Wife Sues Ball Fan Husband. Los Angeles, Cal.—Because her husband, who is a baseball "fan," wagged on the games and, if he lost, made himself disagreeable about the house, Mrs. Florence Engel wants a divorce from Bert L. Engel.

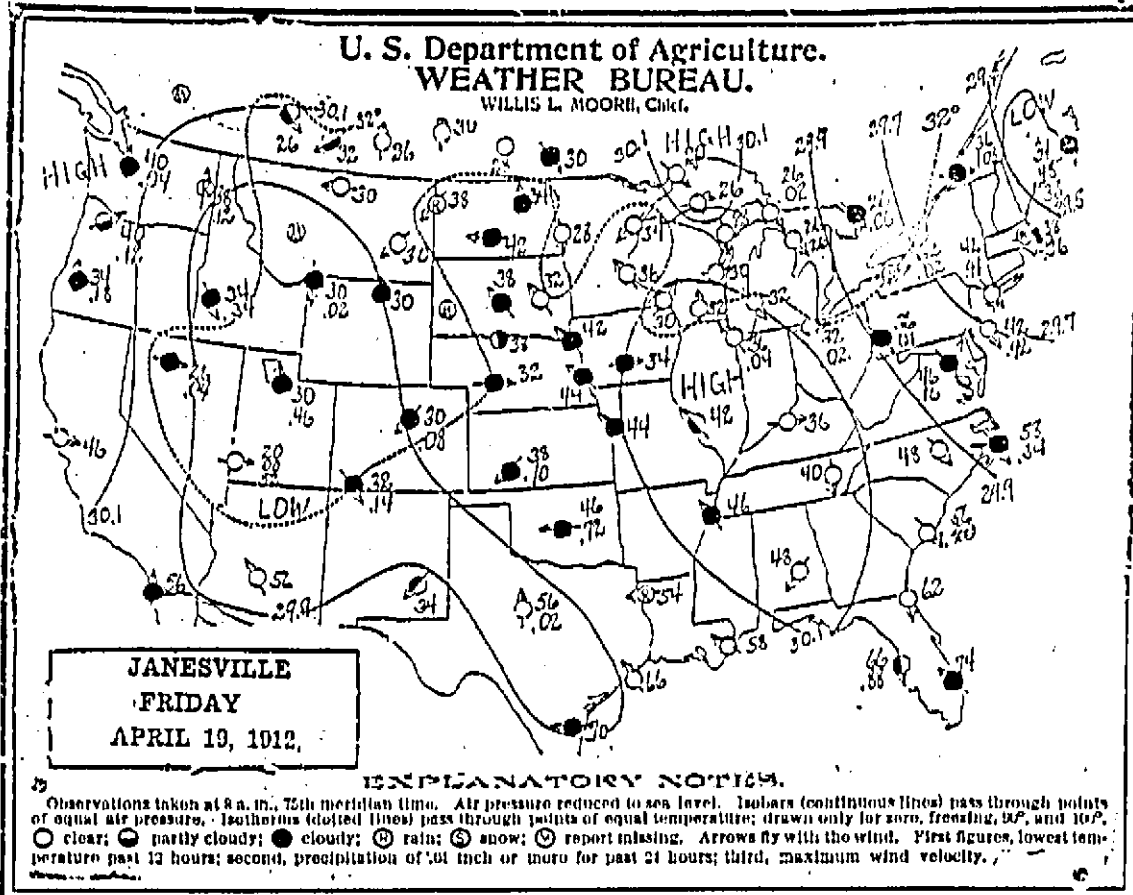

Engel admits being an ardent "fan," but declares that his only wagers were for small stakes like a cigar or a dinner. He also admits that when, by reason of bad playing, the home team lost, he would get angry, and says it is enough to make any human being angry the way some ball players play the national game.

THE TALE IS TOLD.

The story has been told. The awful experiences of the survivors of the Titanic, half-crazed with grief and worn out by the hours of exposure in the small boats. With the cries of those left behind ringing in their ears as the big vessel sank, these unfortunates have landed in New York.

The world wondered and guessed but even the guesses were but meager anticipation of the facts as they are unfolded by the survivors who have reached port. Stories of heroism, tales of husband bravely placing his wife and children in the boats, to step back and go down with the other brave men left behind. Of the suffering women who saw their husbands, brothers, lovers, left behind to die like rats in a trap—all are recounted with their harrowing details.

It appears evident that the terrible loss of life was caused by lack of life-saving apparatus. That the sixteen hundred who lost their lives went down into the deep because the shipowners failed to provide for their safety. That their death is the result of the mad rush for speed demanded by the modern method of living is certain.

Congress may investigate, the English government may investigate, but the fact remains that the loss of life has occurred. That men have died, women have lost all worth living for, and the world condemns the conditions of society which make such an accident even a possibility. It is not a demand of the survivors for justice, but of the whole civilized world for more precautions for life and safety of those who go down to the deep in boats.

A MAN OF MEN.

One of the touching scenes described by a survivor of the Titanic shows the bravery of Colonel Astor. It is a lesson to the world. He faced death bravely, met death like a man. His young wife, a bride of but a few months was rescued. His millions could not save him and he gave his life that women and children might be taken to a place of safety. No matter what was said of him in life he died like a man that he was—a true gentleman—and the world should pay tribute to his honor and forget the past and his apparent weakness.

"There were many touching scenes as the boats put off. I saw Col. John Jacob Astor land his young wife into a boat tenderly and then ask an officer whether he might also go. When permission was refused he stepped back and coolly took out his cigarette case. 'Good bye, dearie' he called gaily as he lit a cigarette, and leaned over the rail. 'I'll join you later.'

McNamara or the Gazette office. Here at home the river has claimed a victim, leaving his family in sore need of help.

The snow is vanishing and the garden will look none the worse for the blessing of nature, even if it caused inconvenience.

Former Prof. Adams, who left the state pay to become a tax commissioner, now defends the income tax law. Why not? That is what he is paid for. If he did not earn his hire he would be unworthy of his doctrine, "Go out and get the money."

Some citizens have already found out the commission means business and they wonder if they have not been misinformed about certain matters.

Heart to Heart Talks.

By EDWIN A. NYE.

HIS DAY OF WRATH.

The other day in New York a man committed suicide because he was out of a job, out of money, and no prospects.

Which is sad, but not uncommon. But this man, mind you, was no poor, miserably paid worker who was barely able to keep soul and body together and who threw up his hands because he had never had a fair chance.

For years he had received a large salary—unusually large. And he exercised reasonable economy and foresight respecting his finances he easily might have provided for the proverbial rainy day. Instead, he and his family had lived at "the top of the pot." They occupied luxurious apartments and denied themselves nothing.

A crash was due. When the big income stopped the family fell in one week from plenty to pauperism.

And this man knew all the time. He knew the day would come when he would step across the dead line which marked his usefulness to his firm and that his salary would stop. Strange, is it not, that a man will face the certainty of disaster and come to the day of wrath without an effort to save himself or his family?

He sported with fate. And he is a type. There are a lot of people like him who receive big salaries and stand always on the verge of ruin. They live up to every cent of their income. And in some cases they spend it in advance.

Which is unfair to others. Somebody must bear the burden of the support of these people when they go thus blithely and unthinking to their end. Even when the head of the family tries to cut the Gordian knot by cutting his throat, there is the family.

J. J. Hill says: "Whether you can succeed in business or not depends upon your answer to the question, Can you save money?"

Moreover—You can succeed neither in business nor in life unless you save money. The saving may be small or it may be invested in some form of insurance or otherwise, but—

The difference between serene old age and dependency—maybe despair—is to be found in the disposition to use self denial in putting away a part of your income.

DRAMATIC SOCIETY PRESENTED A PLAY

Members of Philomathean Society of Milton College Gave Comedy, "Seven-Twenty-Eight" Last Night.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.) Milton, April 19.—"Seven-Twenty-Eight," a four-act comedy, was presented last evening in the college gymnasium by members of the Philomathean society. All of the character parts were taken by men students. The cast was drilled by Miss Swinney, to whom much credit is due for the effectiveness of the production. The Milton college orchestra furnished music. The cast of characters was as follows:

Courtney Corlies, (a gentleman of leisure with a theory concerning bootstraps; employing his idle time in the pleasant pursuit of hunting a hare) ..... J. S. Nelson
Mr. Lamuel Burgess, (a retired party who becomes the victim of the inevitable, and is bound, Macopallike, to his wife's hobby) ..... J. S. Nelson
Paul Hollyhock, (his son-in-law, devoted to his potato-beds until the tempter comes) ..... J. L. Wood Squire Palmer Timberline, (late Maître de Ballet, Covent Garden, now on a mission and searching for an original) ..... G. G. Daland
A Professor on his home, (H. H. Ford Professor) ..... G. G. Daland
Professor Gushelch, (inventor and founder of a refuge for the outcasts of the pen) ..... W. D. Burdick Jobbins, (Hollyhock's farmer) ..... B. H. Ford
Mrs. Hypatia Burgess, (a lady possessed of ancestors, aspirations, and a hobby) ..... L. T. Hull Dora Hollyhock, (her daughter, with a grievance, and who becomes at once her husband's tempter and victim) ..... P. J. Crandall Ploss, (another daughter, the much sought "728") ..... G. H. Crandall Jessie, (a maid, with yearning beyond her station) ..... N. G. Sorenson
G. L. Shumway has returned from his winter visit in Florida.

The Reason Why.

"I wonder why men don't take more interest in the primary? Possibly, because it is a secondary education."

ON THE SPUR OF THE MOMENT
By Roy K. Moulton.

Do You Know This Man. On his face is writ deep knowledge. He is taciturn and grim. And when folks seek information they must always go to him. He's an expert on psychology and politics and such.

And what he is not well versed in doesn't count for very much. A municipal economist, he has won much renown. And his figure is familiar to 'most every one in town.

When he starts a conversation those who listen get a treat. And at all the public meetings he is in the foremost seat.

He could straighten out this government if they'd but let him try. As a giant for mentality for years he has "put by."

There is not a problem in the world he can't settle in his mind. He's a live encyclopedia, a boon to humankind.

He can name the pennant ball club confidently in each league. He can pick the winning horse without the slightest aid of fatigue.

He can tell folks how to dodge the cost of living and grow rich. They can take advice or leave it, and it doesn't matter which.

On religion he's a wonder, knows it all from end to end. In an argument sectarian none dare with him contend.

He's the best word on astronomy; he's giving us his forte. And he knows how to untangle every local knot in court.

He's the champion village oracle and is in great demand. As upon the hotel corner he assumes his daily stand.

Oh, he makes his living easily and all he does is still. For his wife she takes in washing, that's the secret of it all.

Economies. It has been found that the things that expand on solidifying, as water, freeze at a lower temperature when the pressure is increased, while the others freeze at a higher. When a substance that expands freezes under higher pressure than usual it has to exert more force to shove the pressure away, and consequently has to use up more of its heat energy, thus losing more heat and consequently becoming colder.

is very tempting—especially if the Bread has come from our bakery. The fragrance of it attracts the nose and makes your mouth water. In other words, you'll want our bread all the time.

Too Much Continuous Performance.

Little Madge contracted appendicitis, and had to be sent to the hospital to have an operation performed. She bore it all very coolly and pluckily. When she became convalescent, the surgeon came to remove the stitches that had been put in the wound. The child's plea of dignity was very much upset, and she demanded, indignantly: "Do you s'pose I come here to be all stitched up and then unpicked again?"

Tobacco by the Yard.

On Saturday afternoons in the Port Antonio market, on the island of Jamaica, a dozen or more negroes may be seen selling "rope" tobacco by the yard. It is smoked by the natives, and derives its name from the fact that it is twisted and put up in coils like rope, 200 yards to the coil.

Why Say It?

A correspondent wishes to know whether it is proper to say "politics is boiling," or "politics are boiling." We can't imagine why anybody should wish to say it, anyhow.

CASE AGAINST GEORGE
BIDWELL DISMISSED

Judge Fifield on Motion of District Attorney Released Defendant Because of Want of Evidence.

George Bidwell of Rockford, held for examination on the charge of obtaining money by fraudulent means from Mrs. Martha Wicklund, was dismissed from custody by Judge Fifield this afternoon on the motion of District Attorney Dunwiddie, the reason being want of evidence. The District Attorney had communicated with the railway foreman at Evanston, for whom Bidwell had worked and through him learned that Bidwell had been given by him an identification card with the amount of the money due him for three or four days labor written upon it which he judged would be about six dollars. Employees at the freight depot remembered only receiving the identification card. Another complication is that the complaint is slightly deaf and might easily have mistaken "six" for "sixty."

Love Souls.

Deep hearts, sage minds, take life as God has made it; it is a long trial, an incomprehensible preparation for an unknown destiny. This destiny, the true one, begins for man with the first step inside the tomb. In the meanwhile, love and suffer, hope and contemplate. We, alas! to him who shall have loved only bodies, form, appearance! Death will deprive him of all. Try to love souls; you will find them again.—Victor Hugo.

BOARD IS OPPOSED TO STATE AID PLAN OF BUILDING ROADS

County Supervisors Went on Record
Yesterday Against Newly Enacted
Statute.—Board
Adjourns.

Previous to adjournment yesterday afternoon at four o'clock, the Rock County Board of Supervisors went on record against the state aid highway law by the adoption of a resolution introduced by Supervisor Charles B. Moore of Magnolia. The resolution read as follows:

"Whereas the legislature of the state of Wisconsin passed at its last session Chapter 227 of the laws of 1911, commonly known as the 'state aid highway law,' and whereas, we, the County Board of Rock County, Wisconsin, deem the said law unnecessary, uncalled for, burdensome to the taxpayer and a menace to the old principle of home government, now, therefore be it

Resolved, by the County Board of Supervisors of Rock County, Wisconsin, that we declare the said law an imposition, inasmuch as it is called the 'state aid law' when we know that it is a fact that the state does not contribute one cent that is not raised by direct taxation by the several towns, cities and villages; and that it is also together too expensive in execution for the amount of good that can be accomplished by or through it, and further be it

"Resolved, that this resolution be spread upon the Journal of the County Board proceedings and that the County clerks in the state in order that to send copies of the same to all county clerks in the state in order that they may inform their County Boards of the action taken by this Board in the matter, and further be it

"Resolved, that all honorable means be taken by the several members of this board to have the same repealed as speedily as possible."

Supervisor Moore in presenting this resolution to the board, stated that the Rock County Board had consistently been opposed to the law in question and had found it clumsy and ineffective in practice. He moved its adoption and it was passed without a dissenting vote.

A similar resolution was read at this session of the board from Janesville county indicating that the law is meeting with dissatisfaction in other counties in the state as well as in Rock county.

Another note of protest was sounded at the closing session of the board yesterday afternoon in a resolution offered by Supervisor Hoar in regard to the division of the inheritance tax money between the state and the county. According to the present law the state's share is ninety-two and one-half per cent, while only seven and one-half per cent is left with the county. The resolution stated that the division should be made so that fifty per cent of the money collected should remain with the county and the other fifty per cent, less the cost of collection, should be the share of the state.

Supervisor Richardson suggested that the proposition was merely a matter of "rubbing Peter to pay Paul" as the state would collect the money from us in some manner anyway. The resolution was adopted.

Other than the 'Weirick' matter there was little business before the board yesterday afternoon. Supervisor Gleason offered the report of the committee on roads and bridges in regard to the county appropriations for bridges in the towns of Clinton, Newark, Turtle, Fulton and Ayon.

An order was passed for the purchase of road drugs to keep the county highways in repair.

An appropriation of $100 was made for the educational committee for the conducting of diploma examinations. An order for the payment of $12.50, the amount of the bond of County Auditor Smiley was ordered paid.

On the motion of Supervisor C. M. Smith the mileage and per diem of the board members was allowed, without reference and orders were drawn for the same. The board adjourned shortly after four o'clock.

CURIOUS BITS OF HISTORY

CENSURING THE PRESIDENT.

By A. W. MACY.

It is a very rare occurrence for the senate of the United States to pass a vote of censure on the president, but such a thing was done during Andrew Jackson's administration. It was in the year 1834, and the trouble grew out of the celebrated United States bank and the president's relation to it. The resolution of censure read thus: "Resolved, That the president, in his late executive proceedings, in relation to the public revenues, has assumed upon himself authority and power not conferred by the constitution and laws, but in derogation of both." Jackson, as is well known, was not noted for meekness. When he learned of the passage of the resolution he was in a towering rage. He came back at the senate with a message that fairly stirred with wrath. He defied the members and vehemently denied the right of the senate to pass judgment on the executive, a co-ordinate part of the government. The senate was equally obdurate for a time, but finally, in 1837, the resolution was expunged from the records.

AMERICAN GIRL MAY BE "FIRST LADY"

M. Alexander Ribot.

France is just now in the midst of a national election, but, because the president of that republic is largely a figurehead, little international interest is manifested. One of the candidates is M. Alexander Ribot. His wife was formerly a Chicago girl. His campaign is successful and an American girl will become the "First Lady of France."

OF COURSE.

Cream City Wash Boilers Last Twice as Long

Want a boiler you can depend on to wear—and wear for years? Then get the Cream City kind. You can depend on any utensil that bears that name to give the best possible service—but especially on the Cream City Wash Boiler. You'll find it lasts twice as long as the common kind. For it's made extra strong to stand the knocks it's sure to get on wash day. Careless.
At the mixed court recently a charge of arson was preferred against a shop-keeper whose premises are situated in Woosung road. After evidence had been adduced the accused was discharged, says the North China Daily News. His assistant, who was also before the court, received six weeks' imprisonment for carelessness in connection with the outbreak.

Sunk in Deep Pit Shaft.
An alarming subsidence of an old colliery at Intake, Sheffield, England, happened not long ago. While crossing a field near the turnpike a pedestrian was startled by a loud rumbling. The next minute a portion of the earth vanished. Closer examination revealed that an old pit shaft, which had been made part of the field, had subsided 60 feet.

A little want ad brings big results.

RAW PRUNES AS LAXATIVE.

Raw prunes are recommended by the author of the "Preston Papers," in "Life and Health," as a remedy for constipation. An evening meal may well be made of prunes alone, or with figs, which are also laxative. If prunes are fresh they need no cooking. They should be washed and soaked for 12 hours. The skins should be excluded. The California sweet prune is the best, requiring no added sugar. A gentleman in Illinois has eaten prunes only for supper for more than three years, taking the proteid meal, wheat bread and nuts, at noon, and he has had perfect health during that time.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN
CONGRESS IS OPENED

Climax of Men and Religion Forward Campaign—President Taft and Ambassador Bryce Speakers.

New York, April 19.—What is said to be the first really national general Christian congress ever held by the laymen of America was formally opened in this city today and will continue for one week. The congress is the climax of the nine months' campaign of the Men and Religion Forward Movement that has swept over the United States and Canada. Reports of the campaign from every section will be a leading feature of the gathering.

The general sessions of the congress are to be held in Carnegie Hall, with auxiliary meetings in neighboring churches. The program calls for the presentation and discussion of carefully prepared reports on "Immigration," "The Negro Problem," "The Church and the Newspaper," "The Day Problem," "Christian Unity," "The Rural Church," "Bible Study," "Evangelism," and "The Unsolved Problems of the Christianization of the World."

President Taft, Ambassador Bryce and William J. Bryan have accepted invitations to address the congress. Other lay speakers of prominence will include John Mitchell, former Governor Northern of Georgia, J. A. Macdonald of Toronto, Booker T. Washington, Robert E. Speer and John R. Mott. Among the clergymen who will address the congress will be Bishop Greer of New York, Bishop McDowell of Chicago, Dr. R. C. Gray of Glasgow and Archdeacon Madden of Liverpool. The only woman who will appear on the program as a speaker will be Miss Jane Adams, the famous Chicago sociologist and settlement worker.

A great parade of delegates, augmented by special delegations from New York and neighboring cities, is to be held tomorrow afternoon. The men's parade will be followed by one of older boys.

Taft to Talk to Lawyers.
Washington, D. C., April 19.—President Taft has made arrangements to go to New York tomorrow to speak at the annual dinner of the Westchester Bar Association. The dinner is to be given at Delmonico's tomorrow night.

Apis.
It is difficult to believe what early writers tell us of the divine honors lavished upon Apis, the sacred bull of Memphis, and upon Minerva, the sacred ox of Heliopolis. Yet perhaps some of our customs of deeds of today, as handed down by the uninitiated, may seem just as incongruously absurd when heard and understood from an equally proportionate future time.

PRESIDENT WILL REPLY TO CRITICISMS BY COLONEL

Taft in Some of His Next Public Addresses Will Reply to Statements Made by Roosevelt.

Washington, April 19.—President Taft has decided to abandon his attitude of silence under the severe criticisms which Colonel Roosevelt has made of him in campaign speeches, and in some of his next public addresses will reply to the Colonel, probably mentioning him by name. This positively was stated today by those in close touch with the President, and it is said Mr. Taft made his decision only after repeated urging by some leaders of his campaign.

KISSING ALMOST LOST ART

Most Women, Says London Paper, Forget Neatness and Are Vigorous and Wild.

It is surprising that with all the kissing that goes on in our so-called civilized England, so little advance should have been made in the science of bestowing a kiss. Very few persons understand the art. Neatness is forgotten, and the first impulse of the kisses is to wipe away all traces of the offending salutes as speedily as may be consistent with politeness. Others deliver a peck upon the cheeks, and in some cases, by no means a small peck. There are vigorous women whose buffeting are quite enough to produce a toothache in a sensitive jaw. Their kisses for the kisses' whole head. One never knows where the wild kisses of others may alight. With inward shrinking one offers a cheek, wondering what may be going to happen to it, and the result often justifies one's worst fears. The poor cheek is discolored by the assault of lips that have had no training in the art of osculation.—London Express.

INDIANS DECLARED STARVING

Shoshone and Arapahoe Tribes Face Winter Without Money or Supplies, 1,600 Are in Need.

Cheyenne, Wyo.—Hunger stalks on Wind River Indian reservation in Fremont county, Wyo. Sixteen hundred Shoshone and Arapahoe braves, squaws and papooses are face to face with the worst famine they have ever experienced within the knowledge of the white man. Already there is suffering on the reservation and when winter arrives, unless something is done for their relief, there will be many deaths from starvation among the tribes. For the past two years the Indians have been employed by the government on ditch work on the reservation and have been able to subsist on what they earned. The expenditure for this ditch work aggregated about $350,000. The irrigation system is for the Indians, but so far they have raised no crops. Recently work on the ditches ceased and the Shoshone and Arapahoes, who spent the money as fast or faster than they earned it, are left wholly without resources.

TRAPPER ARRESTED BY WOMAN WARDEN

Game Law Violator Whose Fame Held Men Officials at Distance Pays Fine.

"GOT DROP ON HIM"

Colorado Woman Warden Covers "Bad Man" With Rifle, and He Obeys Her Command—His Reputation Gone, Hunter Thinks He Will Move

Sterling, Colo.—The pride of a certain trapper and "bad man" of this neighborhood is completely cast down, his spirit crushed to smithereens. After bluffing out most of the deputy game wardens and other peace officers generally, he has been arrested and brought into court—by a woman.

There is no real reason why he should feel excessively humiliated. A husky repeating rifle, loaded with steel-jacketed bullets, will kill as quickly when a woman's finger presses the trigger as when the best shot on the plains does the same thing. It all depends on the success and the intent with which the rifle is aimed.

Several weeks ago Mrs. Christie Partridge, a widow, was made game warden. The trapper works in her district, and although there is a law against trapping beavers, he has disregarded it systematically, placing no unwarranted faith in his "bad man" reputation.

CHARGES FRAUDS IN APPRAISAL OF COWS

State Veterinarian Declares State is Being Robbed in Appraisal of Animals Condemned for Tuberculosis.

Madison, Wis., April 19.—Frauds in the appraisals of animals condemned for tuberculosis are apparent from disclosures made by state veterinarian Dr. O. H. Ellison, that "the appraisal of some condemned animals is grossly abused in my honest opinion," said Dr. Ellison today. "Cattle condemned at the slaughter plants for tuberculosis even showing no lesions, have been appraised at from $30 to $50, which certainly is a hold-up, and no such claims will receive my approval."

He declared that to place big prices on animals that are mere shadows is preposterous and declared that a thorough investigation will be made before certifying to the secretary of state for audit.

There will be ample room for the state senate in the assembly parlors. This was evidenced today when, at Superintendent Ellison's order, workmen placed thirty-three desks in position. There is plenty of space between the rows and a wide aisle besides room for the presiding officer, sergeant-at-arms, press table and two dozen seats for spectators.

Inspectors Confer.
The state dairy and food commission is extending the work of the dairy and food inspectors to a limited extent, giving them power of sealers of weights and measures. A conference of about twenty inspectors was held in the department today relative to their duties.

MRS. J. J. ASTOR UNDER CARE OF PHYSICIAN

New York, April 19.—Mrs. John Jacob Astor, whose husband died in the wreck of the Titanic, is being cared for by the family physician at the Astor home.

Vermont Y. M. C. A.
St. Johnsbury, Vt., April 19.—Many delegates gathered here today for the forty-first annual convention of the Vermont Y. M. C. A. The convention will last three days and will have as speakers Governor Mead, President Benton of the University of Vermont and several prominent workers of the international organization.

shoulder, while Mrs. Christie Partridge's right eye was glancing meditatively along the barrel.

"Up with 'em!" the woman said unconsciously.

The "bad man" didn't hesitate. Both hands went high above his head.

"I'm the new game warden," Mrs. Partridge continued quietly. "You are under arrest for trapping beavers. They tell me you are a 'bad man.' What's it going to be? Are you going along with me peacefully?"

"Well, mom," replied the trapper, "it kind-a looks like you've got the cards stacked and I reckon I'll have to admit your hand's convincin'. I'm willing to go with you whenever, but I'd be obliged if you wouldn't be quite so careless with that shootin' stick."

A little while later the deputy game warden, her rifle resting lightly in the hollow of her left arm, walked into the nearest justice's office, preceded by the perfectly good "bad man."

The trapper paid a $25 fine and said he reckoned he'd have to move higher up the creek where folks ain't so dogged on civilized.

HUNDREDS LOST LIVES BECAUSE OF SCARCITY OF BOATS

"At 11:45 came the sudden sound of two guns, a warning of immediate danger. The crash against the iceberg, which had been sighted at only a quarter of a mile came almost simultaneously with the click of the levers operated by those on the bridge which stopped the engines and closed the water tight doors.

"Capt. Smith was on the bridge at the moment, giving orders for the summing up of all on board and for the putting on of life preservers and the lowering of the life boats.

"The first boats lowered contained more men passengers than the latter ones, as the men were on deck first, and not enough women were there to fill them.

"When a moment later, the rush of frightened women and crying children to the deck began, enforcement of the women first rule became rigid. Officers boarding some of the boats drew revolvers but in most cases the men, both passengers and crew, behaved, in a way that called for no such restraint.

"Revolver shots, heard by many persons shortly before the end of the Titanic caused many rumors. One was that Captain Smith shot himself another was that first officer Murdoch had ended his life. Smith, Murdoch and sixth officer Moody are known to have been lost. The surviving officers have made no statement.

"Members of the crew discredited any reports of suicide and say Capt. Smith remained on the bridge until just before the ship sank, leaping only after those on the deck had been washed away. It is also related that, when a cook later sought to pull him aboard a life boat, he exclaimed:

"Let me go and looking away, went down.

"What became of the men with life preservers is a question asked since the disaster by many persons. Doubtless bodies floated on the surface as the last boats moved away. To relate that the ship's string band gathered into the saloon, near the end and played 'Nearer My God to Thee' sounds like an attempt to give an added solemn color to a scene which was in itself the climax of solemnity. But various passengers and survivors of the crew agree in the declaration that they heard the music.

"No by my word I'll be 'Nearer My God to Thee' 'Nearer to Thee'.

"In the landing of the first boat restrictions of sex were not made and it seemed to the men who filled in beside the women that there would be boats enough for all. But the ship's officers knew better than this, and as the spreading fear caused an advance towards the suspended craft, the order 'Women first' was heard and the men were pushed aside.

"To the scene of the next two hours on those decks and in the waters below such adjectives as 'dramatic' and 'tragic' do but poor justice. With the knowledge of deadly peril, gaining greater power each moment over those men and women, the courage of the greater part of the men, both among cabin passengers, officers, crew and steward, asserted itself.

"Judson Straus supporting his wife on her way to a life boat was held back by an inexorable guard. Another officer strode to help her to a seat of safety, but she brushed away his arm and clung to her husband, crying, 'I will not go without you.'

"Another took her place and Mrs. Straus, clinging to her husband, became part of a picture now drawn indelibly in many minds.

"Colonel Astor holding his young wife's arm stood decorously aside as the officers spoke to him and Mrs. Astor and her maid were ushered to seats. Mrs. Henry B. Harris parted in like manner from her husband, saw him last at the rail, beside Col. Astor, Walter M. Clark of Los Angeles, nephew of the Montana senator joined the line of men as his young wife, sobbing, was placed in one of the craft. 'Let him come. There is room,' cried Mrs. Emil Tausig as the men of the White Star motioned to her husband to leave her. It was with difficulty that he released her hand to permit her to be led to her place.

"George H. Widener, who had been in Captain Smith's company a few moments after the crash was another whose wife was parted from him and lowered, a moment later, to the surface of the calm sea.

"Of Major Archie Butt, a favorite with his fellow tourists, Charles M. Hoyt, president of the Grand Trunk; of Hon. C. G. Hughes and of Wm. T. Stead, no one seems to know whether they perished long in their state rooms or whether they forebore to approach the fast filling boats; none of them was in the throng which, weary hours afterward reached the Carpathia.

"As they reached the water, those in the boats saw what those on the decks could not see—that the Titanic was listing rapidly to starboard and that her stern was rising at a portentous angle. A rush of men stowed away passengers toward the boats was checked by officers with revolvers in hand.

"Some of the boats crowded too full drifted for a time. None had provisions or water, there was lack of clothing, and the only lights were the still undimmed arcs and incandescents of the settling ship. On one of the boats a steward, who explained to the passengers that he had been shipwrecked twelve hours before, appeared carrying three oranges and a green light. That green light, many of the survivors say was to the shipwrecked hundreds as the pillar of fire by night. Long after the ship had disappeared, and while confounding false lights danced about the boats, the green lantern kept them together on the course which led them to the Carpathia.

"As the end of the Titanic became manifestly but a matter of moments, the women pulled their boats away and the chilling waters began to echo splash after splash as passengers and sailors in life preservers leaped over and started swimming away to escape the expected suction.

"Only the hardest constitution could endure for more than a few moments such a numbing bath. The first vigorous strokes gave way to heart-breaking cries of 'Help, help' and stiffened forms were seen floating, relaxed in death.

"Revolver shots were heard in the ship's last moments. The report spread among the boats was that Capt. Smith had ended his life with a bullet. Then it was said that a mate had shot a steward who had tried to push his way into a boat against orders. None of these tales have been verified, and many of the crew say the captain, without a preserver, leaped in at the last and went down, refusing the cook's offered aid.

"The last of the boats, a collapsible, was launched too late to get away and was overturned by the ship sinking. Some of those in it, all, say some witnesses—found safety on a raft or were picked up by a life-boat. In the Marconi tower almost to the last the click of the sending instrument was heard over the waters.

"As the screams in the water multiplied, another sound was heard, strong and clear at first and then fainter in the distance. It was the melody of the hymn 'Nearer My God to Thee' played by the string orchestra in the dining saloon. Some of those on the water started to sing the words but grew silent as they realized that for the men who played the music was a sacrament soon to be consummated by death. The strains of the hymn and the frantic cries of the dying blended in a symphony of sorrow.

"Led by the green light the boats drew away and the bow, then the quarter, then the stern, and last the stern of the marvel ship of a few days before passed beneath the waters. The great force of the ship sinking was unaided by any violence of the elements and the suction not as great as had been feared rocked but mildly the group of boats now a quarter of a mile distant from it.

"Sixteen boats were in the procession which entered on the terrible hours of rowing, drifting and suspense. Women wept for lost husbands and sons and the men choked back tears and sought to comfort the widowed. They strove, though none too sure themselves, to convince the women of the certainty that a rescue ship would appear.

"Early dawn brought no ship, but not long after five o'clock the Carpathia, far out of her path and making 18 knots instead of her usual 15, showed her single red and black smoke-stack upon the horizon. In the joy of that sight griefs were forgotten for the moment.

"Soon afterward Capt. Rostron and Chief Steward Hughes were welcoming chilled and bedraggled survivors over the Carpathia's side.

"The silence of the Carpathia's engines, the piercing cold, the clamor of many voices in the compartments had caused men to dress hurriedly and awaken by five o'clock, a. m. Monday. Our stewardess meeting me on the side pointed to a waiting boat in the crew dining room and said, 'From the Titanic.' She sat at the bottom of the boat.

"At the ship's side a moment later I saw the last of the line of boats discharge their loads and saw women come with cheap shawls about their heads, some with the coatless of fur cloaks, some with the light of our ship. As the first sight of our ship may have given them had disappeared from their faces and there were tears and signs of faltering as the women were helped up the ladders or hoisted aboard in swimmers. For lack of room to stow their several of the Titanic's boats were set adrift.

"At our north was a broad lee field, a length of hundreds of the Carpathias. Around us on other sides were sharp and glistening packs. One black berg seen about 10:00 a. m. was said to be that which sank the Titanic.

"In his tiny house over the second cabin smoking room was Harold Cotton, the Marconi operator, a ruddy English youth whose work at his post on what seemed ordinary duty until almost midnight had probably saved the lives of the huddling hundreds below.

"Already he was knitting his brows over the problem of handling the messages which were coming in batches from the pursers' office. The haste in which these Marconigrams were prepared by their senders was needless in view of the wait of two days and two nights for a land connection.

"The California, a cattle ship, came near us, and though it gave no sign of having any of the Titanic's refugees on board, its presence in the vicinity gave hope to many women who were encouraged in the belief that the California might have picked up their loved ones.

"Capt. Rostron's decision to abandon the Mediterranean trip began on Thursday, and the return to an American port was soon known to the passengers. At first it was reported that Halifax or Boston would be the destination, but at noon the notice of the intended arrival at New York three days later was posted. Few men of the Carpathia's passenger list slept in a bed in any of the nights that followed. They and the men of the Titanic lay in chairs on deck, on dining tables or smoking room couches or on the floors of the rooms which held their hand baggage. The captain was the first to vacate his room which was used as a hospital. Mrs. Jacob Astor and Countess of Rothes had been taken to state rooms soon after their arrival on shipboard. Those who talked with Mrs. Astor said she spoke of her husband's ability as an oarsman and said he could save himself if he had a chance; that he could have had such a chance she seemed hardly to hope.

"To another state room a tall, dark man had been conducted. His head bowed, anguish in his face. He was Bruce Ismay, head of the International Mercantile Marine company and chief owner of the Titanic and her sister ship, the Olympic. He has made the maiden voyage on each of his company's great ships. He remained in his room in a physician's care during the voyage back to New York. Capt. Rostron, his only entree, was not admitted to see him until Tuesday evening.

"Robert Hekens, one of the six surviving quartermasters of the Titanic, the man who was on duty at the wheel when the ship struck the iceberg, told me the story of the wreck on the Carpathia, Thursday.

"Save for the surviving fourth officer, Roxhall, whose lips are swollen, Hekens saw Sunday night's tragedy at closer range than any man now living. His story was:

"I went on watch at 8 o'clock Sunday night and stood by the man at the wheel until 10. At 10 I took the wheel for a two hour trick. On the bridge from 10 o'clock were First Officer Murdoch, Fourth Officer Hoxhall, and Sixth Officer Moody. In the crew's nest (lookout tower) were Fleet and another man whose name I do not know.

"Second Officer Lightoller who was on watch while I stood by, carrying messages and the like from 8 to 10, sent me soon after 8 to tell the carpenter to look out for the fresh water supply as it might be in danger of freezing. The temperature was then crash came. He stopped the engines then immediately by another lever he closed the water-tight doors.

"The skipper (Capt. Smith) came from the chart room onto the bridge. His first words were 'Close the emergency doors.'

"They're already closed, sir," Mr. Murdoch replied.

"Send to the carpenter and tell him to sound the bell," was the skipper's next order. The message was sent to the carpenter. The carpenter never came up to report. He was probably the first man on that ship to lose his life.

"The skipper looked at the commutator which shows in what direction the ship is listing. He saw that she

The order, 'Women and children first,' was given and enforced. There was no panic.

I was at the wheel until 12:15.

It was my duty to stay there until relieved. I was not relieved by anyone else, but was simply sent away by Second Officer Lightoller, who told me to take charge of a certain boat and load it with women.

I did so and there were thirty-two women, one hand and myself in the boat when it was lowered some time after one o'clock—I can't be sure of the time.

The Titanic had sixteen life-boats and two collapsible boats. All of them got away loaded except that one of the collapsibles which did not

Our boat was 400 yards away when the ship went down. The suction nearly must have been terrible, but we were only rocked somewhat.

I heard revolver shots, as everyone did. I cannot say who fired any of them. I have only told what I know and what I shall tell any marine court that may examine me.

G. W. Whitteman of Palmyra, N. J., the Titanic's barber, was lowering boats on deck after the collision and declared the officers on the bridge, one of them Second Officer Murdoch, promptly worked the electrical apparatus for closing the water-tight compartments. He believes the machinery was in some way so damaged by the crash that the front compartment failed to close tightly although the rear ones were secure.

Whitteman's manner of escape was singular. He was blown off the deck by the second of the two explosions of the boilers and was in the water more than two hours before he was picked up by a raft.

"The explosions," Whitteman said, "were caused by the rushing in of the icy water on the boilers. A bundle of deck chairs roped together was blown off the deck with me and struck my back, injuring my spine, but it served us a temporary raft.

"The crew and passengers had faith in the bulkhead system to save the ship and were lowering a composite boat, all confident the ship would get through, when she took a terrible dip forward and the water rushed up and swept over the deck and into the engine rooms.

"The bow went clean down and I caught the pile of chairs as it washed up against the rail. Then came the explosions and blew me fifteen feet. After this water had filled the forward compartments the ones at the stern could not hold. They did delay the ship from going down, if it wasn't for the compartments hardly anyone could have gotten away.

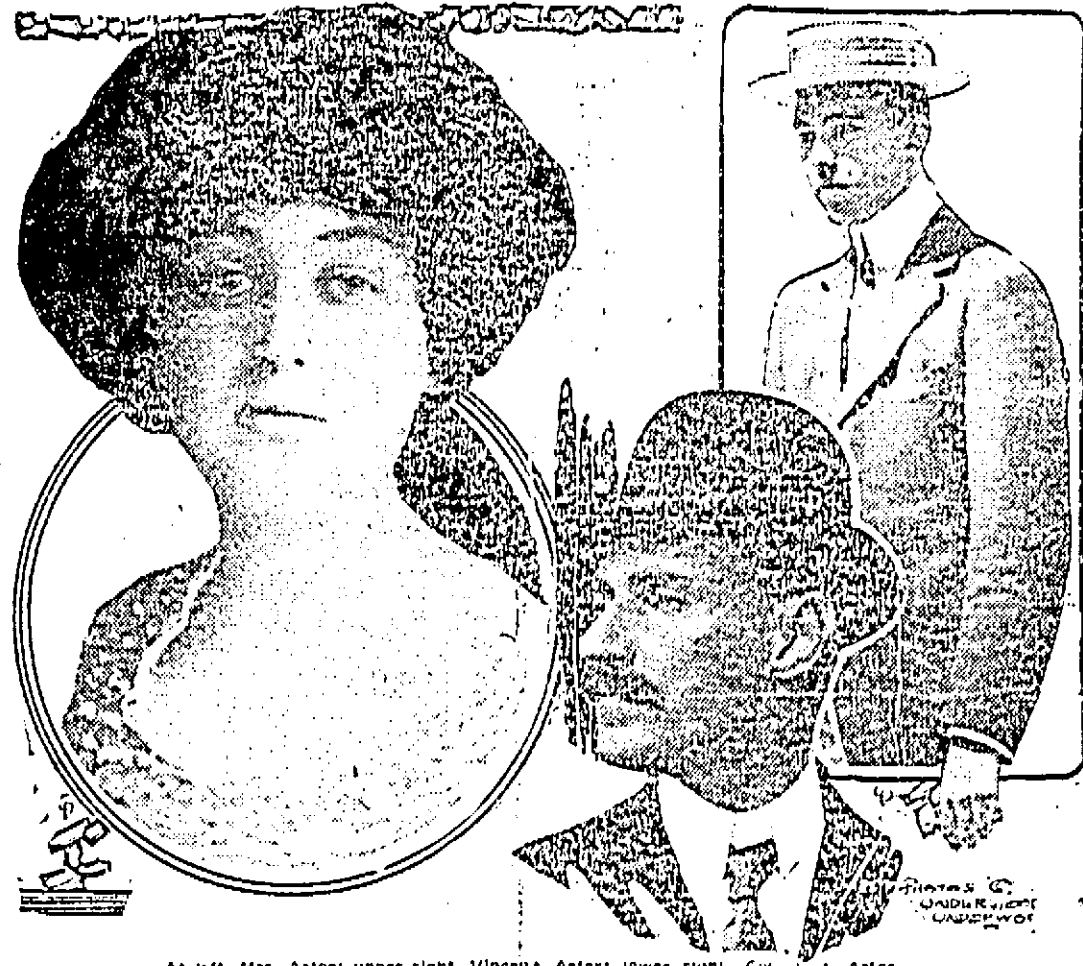

"The water was too cold for me to swim and I was hardly more than one hundred feet away when the ship went down. The suction was not what one would expect and only rocked the water around me. I was picked up after two hours. I am done with the sea."

To most of the passengers the midnight crash against the mountain of ice did not seem of terrible force. Many were so little disturbed by it that they hesitated to dress and put on life preservers, even when summoned by thundering knocks and shouts of the stewards. Bridge players in the smoking room kept on with their game.

Once on the deck many hesitated to enter the swaying life-boat. The glossy sea, the starlit sky, the absence in the first few moments of intense excitement, gave them the feeling that there was only some slight mishap—that those who got into the boats would have a chilly half hour below and might later be laughed at.

It was such a feeling as this, from all accounts, which caused John Jacob Astor and his wife to refuse the places offered them in the first boat and to retire to the gymnasium. In the same H. J. Allison, Montreal banker, laughed at the warning and his wife reassured by him took her

MRS. CLARA ANDERSON STRICKEN BY DEATH

Well Known Milton Woman Died Suddenly Yesterday From Heart Failure.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Milton, April 10.—Mrs. Clara Anderson died suddenly yesterday afternoon from heart trouble. She had recovered from an attack of the grippe and was able to be about the house, but died a few moments after the sudden attack. Mrs. Anderson had been a resident of this village for more than a half century and since the death of her husband, many years ago, she lived with her youngest son, Charles. Despite the fact that she was an unassuming, home-loving woman who rarely appeared in public, she was a good neighbor and had a large circle of friends. Conversation—Maids—Where is Mrs. C.—Liver? Doctor—I should say slightly above the belt on the right side—unless some accident has misplaced it. You can guess the rest. Curtain and slow music.

SIDEWALK SKETCHES.

By Howard L. Rahn.

Soap is an article which is rubbed on the human frame so that people can tell each other from the tree-climbing chimpanzees. There are two kinds of soap—hard and soft. In the early days of the republic everybody used soft soap made out of wood ashes. This was the most preferable soap ever invented, and was used mainly to rinse naughty words out of the mouths of small boys, by whom it was considered a great delicacy. There is a good deal of soft soap still in use, most of which is paid for at regular advertising rates and is used in the manufacture of political, social and ecclesiastical hokes. All newspaper men are agents for this kind of soap, which contains a new brand of lye. This hard soap was introduced in about the time the porcelain bath tub was discovered. This was in the fall of 1865, when the exteriors of patriotic people were chafed with soft maple leaves, and a great many citizens found it hard to distinguish between a rich quality of eastern water and the soft soap then in use. Since it became fashionable to bathe every few weeks the demand for soap has increased amazingly, until now it can be found in almost every home. A cake of soap is in a lavender wrapper, bearing the breath of violets and cottonseed oils, adds a touch of refinement to the humblest abode. Some people buy soap for ornamental purposes and are careful not to overwork it while others are reckless in its use and emerge from the morning scrub with the pink and white complexion of a barber pole. The American Indian seldom buys any soap for his own use, but the Esquimaux consumes large quantities of it as a substitute for desert. On the whole, it may be safely said that more soap could be used to considerable advantage without hurting anybody's feelings.

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

DID ANYONE ever, I wonder, wait at a meeting place for a tardy friend, without passing through three distinct states of mind?

The first state of mind is one of irritation. "She is always late," you think as you consult your watch; "I will never promise to meet her again. I suppose she'll have some story of the car being slow, for she always does. There's no sense in it. She ought to allow for that when she starts."

How long this state of mind lasts all depends upon your previous experiences with your friend's capability for tardiness. In ordinary cases it would endure from five to ten minutes. At the end of that time, irritation gives place to an entirely new feeling.

This new state of mind, as of course you know if you have ever waited for anyone, is a growing wonder if you or she could have made any mistake in the time or place appointed for meeting. "Could she have said it's instead of it's?" you question yourself. "We used to meet at it's. No, I'm sure she said it's, for I remember thinking that they had such a nice waiting room in here." "Could it have been half past three instead of half past two?" is the next question. "No," you assure yourself, "because she never could have expected us to get all we planned done, and get out to Corn's at five. Still that would be just like her. I've a good mind to telephone. But if I go away from here she'll be sure to come and think I've given her up. Oh, dear, why must she always be late?"

The third state of mind sets in earlier or later according to the temperament of the waiter. But half an hour of waiting almost always brings to the average person the apprehension that something has happened to the missing one. "Could she have been run over? These automobile accidents are so common nowadays. Can she be sick? Can it be that her mother is worse?" She looked real miserable the last time I was there and she's liable to these sudden attacks. Dear me, wouldn't it be terrible for Lucy if anything should happen to her mother. She depends on her mother so much," so runs the current of your thought, and so probable does this entirely groundless hypothesis of yours seem to you, that you have almost come to regard it as a fact, and are proportionately relieved when you see Lucy's familiar figure hurrying towards you.

"Your car broke down?" you respond to her breathless explanations. "Lucy, you do have the worst luck. I was getting real worried about you. Nonsense? Well, I guess you wouldn't say so if you were me. I felt that something must be the matter. I never waited quite so long before. How's your mother?" so you greet your recalcitrant friend, much more warmly on the whole than you would have, had she come in that first ten or fifteen minutes.

Is the moral, to be half an hour late if you must be late at all? No. If there's any moral, it's this: If you haven't made a mistake in the time or the meeting place, who hasn't been run over or taken suddenly ill; no member of her family has died; she's just late, no she has been before, and will be again. So next time don't fret and worry. Just sit still and read a book or paper, and remember this little talk, and possess your soul in patience. Will I do the same? I'll try to, my friend. That's the best I can promise.

TALKS with our WOMEN READERS by Edna K. Wooler

Have you inspected your last summer's hat to see if it would "do" for spring wear after cleaning and maybe coloring, and a bit of new ribbon or a spray of fresh flowers?

Of course you have. And you've discovered what all the rest of us have discovered to our sorrow—that semi-annual re-cleaning sorrow occasioned by a comparison with last year's shape with the present shape.

"Now there," quoth a girl who held at arm's length her last summer's straw, "is a perfectly good hat. It isn't worn out a bit. All it needs is cleaning and some new trimming."

I paid a good price for that hat last year, though it would surely do me two seasons. But look at it! It's got a low flat crown and a wide brim that curls up around the edges. It simply isn't anywhere near the right shape for this year. Now I've got to go out and buy one of those ugly derby things with a dinky little brim, like all the girls are wearing. If I don't want to feel that I'm a perfect guy when I go out on the street."

"Everybody is so extravagant now," sighed the girl's mother. "When I was a girl I had a leghorn that was the pride of my heart and it was my very best for a good many years. But if a girl doesn't have something new every three months, now she thinks it is disgraceful. We would have thought it disgraceful to be so extravagant when I was a girl. How times change!"

We might say that the changes "make business." They do. We might also say that people don't need to emulate themselves in the styles. Some don't—but they are minded persons. If everybody doesn't look like everybody else, according to the season, who is decidedly conspicuous, and no woman desires to be conspicuous—in that way. She knows how she is pitied and socially shunned when she's a back number in her clothes.

A good many of us, however, have found it a wearisome task to keep up with the changes that "make business." The tax is too great upon our strength and our purses. It's threesome to be continually buying new clothes and to hustle so continually to get the wherewithal to buy 'em. To such of us the millinery revolt of the New York suffragets comes as a note of hope.

If only the suffragets could make that 35-cent hat the style—not only for one season but for all seasons! What untold joy would be ours. What sums we might win in the savings bank. What actual comfort we might enjoy in the knowledge that we need no longer strain ourselves in getting something new (and unbecoming) each season.

Any man will agree that women who have the supremely good sense to invent and wear a useful, becoming, decent hat, could be trusted with the ballot. If men were assured that woman's right to vote also meant the right to wear the same style of hat forever—an economically-pledged hat, to be sure—municipality would fall over itself hawking to the polls to give its better-half the franchise.

Of course, the milliners wouldn't like it. A good many of them would have to go out of business. But who knows but that if they transferred their talents from making imitation gardens grow on hats, to encouraging real vegetation on the ground, they'd be better off in both health and wealth.

As it is, more than one woman with a $20 idea sneaks into the 10-cent store for a wire hat frame and a bunch of raffia, and hawks her imitations of the big stores for tramping at knocked down prices, out of which she manages to construct a 90-cent affair which really looks good enough to wear to a club meeting.

The American woman excels in just that sort of thing. She can put on a better front for less money than any of her foreign sisters. That's why she has earned the approbrium of extravagance. It's really a case of sour grapes, because an American woman can look more like a fairy-story princess in a 5-cent chambray and a made-over millinery, than the real article born to the purple but without the talent to look the part.

thing on a strip of surgeon's adhesive plaster, and then a more generous piece over that, the leak was stopped for a time at least.

To make a plain lettuce salad taste a little different put two or three leaves together like a cup and sprinkle with finely ground nuts. Serve with French dressing.

Bermuda onions are in the market and make a good salad if there is no hesitancy about eating even a mild onion. Served with a Dutch sauce they make one forget scruples about onion eating. Cook the onions in water until tender, changing the water twice and replacing it with boiling water each time.

Drain and cover with the sauce for which rub together two level table-spoons each of butter and flour and add to one and one-half cups of veal or chicken broth. Cook ten minutes, add the yolks of three eggs beaten with one-half cup of thin cream then cook until the egg thickens. Season with a teaspoon of lemon juice also salt and paprika.

An orange pie is a version of the popular lemon pie that is worth having at times. Mix two level table-spoons of cornstarch in one cup of cold water, add three-quarters cup of boiling water and cook three minutes. Add a pinch of salt, the grated rind of a large orange, one tablespoon of lemon juice, the juice of three oranges and one cup of sugar.

When cool add the beaten yolks of two eggs and fill a paste lined plate. Bake and partly cool then cover with a meringue made from the whites of two eggs beaten with one-quarter cup of powdered sugar. Set in a slow oven to color.

SOME GOOD SUBSTANTIAL DISHES FOR THE FARM HOME.

For the busy farmer's wife who has much work and many months to feed dishes which may be prepared with the least outlay of time and money are welcomed by her. When a large family of hungry men and boys are to be fed there is no dish more filling and wholesome than:

Potato Pie.—This is an English dish and a great favorite across the water. Put equal parts of round steak and fresh lean pork, cut in serving pieces, into a frying pan and brown; dredge with flour and cover with boiling water and simmer for an hour; add an onion, a carrot, and turn all into a baking dish, cover with quartered potatoes, add water and bake until the potatoes are brown. The amount of meat and vegetables used depends on the size of the family.

Another dish which is new to America is:

Sausage With Pudding.—Take sufficient pork sausage for the family to be served, place in a baking pan and cook in the oven until the fat has been well tried out; drain off all but two or three table-spoonsful of the fat and pour over the sausage.

Yorkshire Pudding.—Take two cups of milk and add gradually to two well beaten eggs. Mix with a cup of flour and a teaspoonful of salt. Pour over the sausage and bake. If the sausage are cooked in a serving dish it may be carried to the table and served from it. This is a good dish to place out with, when unexpected company arrives.

Potato Doughnuts.—Cream three table-spoonsful of butter, add three-fourths of a cup of sugar, and the yolks of three eggs beaten, then stir in a cup of freshly mashed potato and a fourth of a cup of milk. Add two and a half cups of flour, three table-spoonsful of baking powder, half a teaspoon of salt and ground maco and a fourth of a teaspoonful of nutmeg. Roll out and fry in deep fat.

Heart and Home Problems

MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Could you suggest something nice to serve for a wedding dinner at small expense.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: The cost of a wedding dinner can be comparatively small if one does not have to hire caterers, and can dispense with the little added expenses of placecards, favors and knickknacks, such as salted nuts and expensive candies. For twenty or thirty guests you might serve the following four-course dinner:

Tomato Soufflé
Roast Chicken
Creamed Peas, Cranberry Sauce (or Jelly, if cranberries can not be had.)
Asparagus or Fruit Salad
Ice Cream or Fruit
Cakes
Coffee
A wedding supper can, of course, be served at less expense.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) Will one application of delatone remove permanently superfluous hairs? (2) Will it remove strong hairs such as sometimes grow over the top of the nose between the eyebrows? (3) Is electrolysis a quick process of removing moles? Please explain this process.

U. S. M.
(1) Nothing but the electric needle will remove hairs permanently. Such treatments as the one you ask about will remove the surface hair without destroying the root, the result being that each time a growth of hair is removed, a new growth of coarser hair takes its place. A facial specialist says that such preparations as the one you mention have been the means of causing her to turn away more women than she could find time to treat women who had tried these remedies and finally gone to her to have the coarse hairs removed by the electric needle. It is most important, however, that one have a first class specialist do the work, for there are a number of incompetents in the practice whose treatments might do injury. (2) Electrolysis is the only treatment also for a growth of hair between the eyebrows. (3) Yes, it is the quickest and safest process for removing moles. Electrolysis in this connection is the process of destroying the roots either of hairs or of moles, by use of the electric needle.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Please tell me what will make a good bleach for the arms, so that I can wear short sleeves.
M. A.
Two or three drops of ammonia in an ounce of peroxide of hydrogen forms an effective bleach for the skin. One can buy liquid powder which will whiten the skin temporarily, but care must be taken not to get harmful preparations.

Recent writers have obliged us to radically change our views concerning the ancient inhabitants of Mexico and Peru. If you will read what John Fiske has to say of the civilization of those two peoples at the time they were found by Cortez and Pizarro you will find that the works of Prescott are no longer of much use to you. Fiske, in his "Discovery of America," shows that the civilization of these peoples was not by any means the thing we were some years ago taught to think it was. It was civilization, but simply a higher form of barbarism.

One He Didn't Break.

The man who sometimes spoke his thoughts aloud had been more concerned with the things of the world than with things spiritual. One day his hand fell upon a book containing the catechism of a certain Protestant church, and he was soon earnestly engaged in reading the Ten Commandments. For some time he pondered over the "Thou shalt" and "Thou shalt not," which had been forgotten almost since childhood. Then, laying down the book with a sigh, he muttered, "Well, I've never killed anybody, anyway."—Everybody's Magazine.

UP-TO-DATE HOUSEKEEPING

Accidents that Happen to a Vacuum Cleaner—Savory Spring Dishes.

By Alice E. Whitaker.

Our mechanical assistants cannot voice their need of cleaning or oiling and when they hitch and halt it is too generally the way to lay them aside with disgust. Recently a housewife, to whom I had recommended a vacuum cleaner like my own, announced that hers was useless and her money wasted as the cleaner would not draw up a speck of dirt. Investigation showed that the receiving bag and about ten inches of rubber hose, were packed tightly with dirt.

When the bag was emptied, and the hose freed from dirt by using a hot pin, the cleaner was once more as good as new.

Another housekeeper bawled the thick rubber hose back closely against the cleaner by setting it in a small broom closet. A look resulted and the suction power was lost. By put-

Joan—No; watchmaker.

OPPOSED TO KILLING BIRDS.

Mrs. Dixon—Does your husband

Mrs. Dixon—Hardly. He's vice-president of the local Audubon society.

HARD LINES.

Lord Goldough—When are you to be married to Miss Hillyard?
Lord De Broke—Never.
Lord Goldough—Why not?
Lord De Broke—She won't marry me until I pay my debts, and I cannot pay my debts until she marries me.

The Poet Philosopher

George Matthew Adams
BY WALT MASON

Farewell to snow and frost, to landscapes all congealed; this is the balmy season of which the birds have sighed; no more are blizzards tearing across a land desolate; the familiar, softly swarming, goes forth to plow his field. The old bay broncho's bucking and dancing on all SPRING fours; the speckled hen is clucking; the housewife is chattering around with nuptial, meaning to do the springtime cleaning, and drive the men outdoors. The ardent boys are tumbling into the swimming holes;

the busy bees are bustling to gain their daily toll; the candidates are standing around, our votes demanding, and to us daily handing a windy cigar. The poets have collected these verses, rejected, and soon to them by mail; to sell his patent washer the agent, genial Josher,
hands out his line of wash or bull con-to get the sale. Oh, Spring, you are a winner, the best thing on the place!
You give us greens for dinner and other things we like; you fill the land with roses, and thaw our frosted noises; we're munched upon your power,
and hate to see you like!

A PAIR OF FOURS.

Calman (from the south)—Ah! I carry yo' anyhow to fo' bits, mistah.
Cholly (who is broke)—What I'm looking for is four bits, don't you know.

These Days.

"Did you insist on having 'love,
honor and obey' included in the marriage service?"
"No," replied Philbrick; "the only thing I made my wife promise was that she wouldn't smoke in the house."

FORTY YEARS AGO

Janesville Gazette, April 19, 1872.—
The capital stock of the La Crosse,
Black River Falls and Delafield railroad has all been subscribed.

General Sherman and party have arrived at Oshkosh. They go to Sabadal, Tiffin, Moscow and St. Peter-burg.

The steam shovel excavating the bluffs at Council Bluffs unearthed a lot of human and animal bones that are a curiosity to the antiquarian.
From their depth below the surface and their geological surroundings one would take them to be prehistoric.

last night. James has friends in every public gathering, but he doesn't aspire to official dignity.

Court street residents are divided on the question of the establishment of a new grade. If the present grade is continued how can that big hole back of the court house be brought up to the level of the street?

Rev. Dr. Hodge has accepted a call

Those who have experienced the sensation of having a defunct infant threat upon their possession will appreciate the honor of two Second ward ladies who discovered a mysterious bundle in their wood box and before yesterday. They sent for a corner and twelve men to sit on the deceased wife, but the thing was mysterious and the thing was merely a bundle of old rags which some one had tied up and carelessly deposited in the wood box to rot them with.

Three Days in Open Boat on Sea.

Two French seaweed cutters, a man and a woman, had a trying experience recently. They had been gathering seaweed near St. Malo, off the coast of France, in a small boat and being unable to make land, remained in the English channel for three days and three nights. They eventually drifted into Ploermeur bay, Jersey, completely exhausted. They had had no food except a crust of bread, and were wet through and very weak.

Where They Disagreed.

Meyerbeer and Rossini, in spite of all their rivalries, were the warmest of friends. Rossini once said: "Meyerbeer and I can never agree." When some one in surprise asked why, he replied: "Meyerbeer likes sauerkraut better than I do macaroni."

Cold-Blooded Prompter.

A very small child almost busted up a matinee performance of a Broadway show one recent afternoon. One of the characters, after having a run of domestic difficulties, grabs up a bottle off a table, and cries wildly:
"Prussic acid tablets! Shall I take one?" The "business" is to hesitate
a moment, then put the bottle down, saying, "No—not now." But this day, while he stood clutching the bottle, a little delighted voice piped up from the orchestra: "Yes! Take one!"—

MANY DIFFICULTIES ABANDONING SHIP WHICH IS DISABLED

L. E. BOOKOUT OF THIS CITY, A FORMER NAVY MAN, EXPLAINS METHODS USED ON MODERN MAN-OF-WAR.

PROBLEMS OF TITANIC

Where Frantic Passengers Are Rushing to Life Boats Amid Terrible Storm Can Only Be Imagined.

Some of the difficulties which are presented in abandoning a disabled ship at sea are very vague in the mind of laypeople who will consequently be interested in the following account of the method of "abandoning ship" as described by L. E. Bookout, present circulation manager of the Gazette, who served for four years in the United States Navy.

Mr. Bookout saw service as hospital steward and chief petty officer on various men-of-war including the Alabama, and the two cruisers, the Newark and the Des Moines. He was also on the Monongahela when it was burned off the coast of Cuba and had actual experience in abandoning a ship in distress. Following is his account of some of the difficulties which must have been presented on the Titanic:

"Abandoning Ship." "The recent disaster on the steamship Titanic may bring to mind of those not experienced in sea faring ways the question as to how a ship is abandoned. It might appear to be an easy matter if one should form their opinion just from what they see of photographs of ships, but to abandon a ship in open sea is quite another matter.

"A comparison of the methods used in the United States navy would probably bring to mind clearer than any other the manner in which this is accomplished and the difficulties to be encountered in the event.

"One must bear in mind that on a modern man-of-war each man, from captain down, is regularly drilled in 'abandoning ship.' Every man has his station and his duty, and when the time comes he knows exactly what to do.

Difficulties Presented. "Having been through this drill a great number of times I am well aware that it takes a greater amount of time than the average person would suppose. It takes approximately two hours to abandon a modern battleship. This is while on a smooth sea and boats being lowered from both sides of the ship. Imagine the difficulties presented in lowering boats from a disabled ship. A disabled ship would in all probability list one way or the other. While this would not interfere with lowering boats on one side, yet it would make it impossible to lower boats on the other, or at least to lower them safely and this probably accounts for losing some of the boats in the Titanic disaster. Then, again, it is much more difficult to lower boats on the weather side of the ship than it is on the lee side, or the side protected from the wind and wave. Lifeboats are swung from davits or small cranes on the upper deck. People have to get into these boats before they are lowered. This adds greatly to the difficulty of handling, and getting the boats quickly away from the side of the vessel to prevent its capsizing.

"In addition to these natural difficulties in the Titanic disaster, the crew had the much greater difficulty of handling a crowd of frantic people, inexperienced in the ways of the sea. This, no doubt, was the greatest difficulty of all and had there been a sufficient number of life boats it would have required twice the time from the time of the collision of the ship to the sinking to save all on board.

Case of Titanic. "It is a fact that it is almost impossible to sink a modern ocean liner as well as a modern battleship. This is owing to the fact that in each ship there is built throughout its entire length watertight compartments, and although even half the ship be carried away the other half would float. These watertight compartments are formed by building bulkheads or partitions across the ship. Through each bulkhead there is a water-tight door which is closed from the bridge by means of electricity. It is hardly probable that these water-tight doors were closed in the case of the Titanic.

"The ship while making a speed of twenty-three knots an hour was striking an iceberg with sufficient force to break open the greater number of watertight bulkheads, or at least to destroy the electric connection of the watertight doors, and render those compartments useless. This is, no doubt, what happened, if it be true as reported, that the ship broke in two before sinking.

"In watching a ship move through the water one can hardly realize the tremendous force with which it moves, but having been in a collision myself, I can safely say that the experience is little short of hair-raising.

A Warship Collision. "While leaving New York harbor a few years ago on the United States Ship Alabama, this ship rammed the United States Ship Kentucky. Being in the forward compartment, right at the point of contact of the two ships, I was in a position to see the effects of the collision of two ships moving at low speed. It sounded like the falling of a huge building and it appeared for a moment that the whole side of the ship was going to cross over to the other. However, the damage was slight owing probably to the fact that both ships carried a heavy steel armor. However, in the case of the Titanic there was no steel armor to lessen the damage of collision. There is simply a steel frame work which, under the mighty impact of sixty-six thousand tons moving at twenty-six miles an hour would crumple like so many straws."

HUNDREDS LOSE LIVES BECAUSE OF SCARCITY OF BOATS

time dressing. They and their daughter, did not reach the Carpathia. Their son, less than two years old, was carried into a life boat by his nurse and was taken charge of by Major Arthur Penchen. The admiration felt by the passengers and crew for the matchlessly appointed vessel was translated in these first few moments into a confidence which proved deadly.

R. M. Williams, a Philadelphia youth on his way home from England to take the Harvard entrance examinations, was one of the saloon passengers excluded by the "women first" order from the boats. His father, Isaac Williams was lost.

"My father and I had about given up our hope for life and were standing together," said young Williams, "when we resolved to jump together if we could so long as either of us lived. I had on my fur coat."

There were eighteen men in it and it was in charge of an officer. There were no women in the boat and it was not more than one-third filled. All of the men were able to come up the Jacob's ladder on the Carpathia which was thrown over the port side. Every one of them was given a blanket and brandy or as much hot black coffee as he wanted. After they were all on board we pulled up their boat. It was bright morning by now and all around the Carpathia, here and there, about a quarter of a mile apart, were more boats. Those were nearer full than the first and there were women in all of them. The women were hoisted up in chairs and the men who could do so, climbed the Jacob's ladder. Some of the men, however, had to be hoisted up, especially the frozen. There was a whole watch of frozen men saved. They were nearly naked. They had jumped overboard and swam after the boats. It turned out that they were almost frozen stiff.

"The women were dressed and the funny thing about it is, only five of them had to be taken to the hospital. Both the men's hospitals were filled—twenty-four beds in all. We got twelve boatloads, I think, loads of a little more than an hour. Then he-showed the women into the boats, telling them that they wanted all the women together and all the men together. And even then they could not get the half of them to go.

"A woman passenger told me that one beautiful old lady put her arms around her husband's neck and neither the officer nor her husband could get her arms loose. And neither of them was saved."

PHILOTAIXANS HELD MEETING YESTERDAY

Life And Works of James Russell Lowell Treated in Papers — Read Chapters in Original Story.

Papers and talks on the life and writings of James Russell Lowell were given at the meeting of the Philotaxian Society yesterday afternoon following a business session. The life of the poet and essayist was sketched by Miss Mary Boardman, and Miss Mary Butters reviewed his writings in a well written paper. Miss Jessie Buell read another chapter of her entertaining original serial story. Parliamentary drill was postponed because of the late hour, and the meeting adjourned after the report of the critic had been read.

SUFFRAGE ADVOCATES WILL CANVASS CITY

Plans For Active Campaign Drawn up at Meeting Held Yesterday At Home of Mrs. A. P. Lovejoy.

Plans for an active campaign in the behalf of woman's suffrage, including a house to house canvass, the districting of the city, and the assignment of the districts to different members for the purpose of distributing literature and blanks for membership in the county organization, were made at a meeting held yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. A. P. Lovejoy, president of the Janesville Equal Suffrage League. Mrs. Fred Capello was elected vice president of the League.

Previous to the business meeting a lively discussion of the suffrage question was held, both friends and opponents of the proposed amendment to the state constitution being heard. A large number of ladies were present. Mrs. A. P. Lovejoy gave a brief address, in which were quoted extracts from an address by Prof. Thomas of the Women's College of Baltimore, commending the success of woman's suffrage. He asserts that wherever it has been put into practice improvements have followed in the character of legislation and of politics.

Latrop, who lectures on the subject of woman's suffrage at the Presbyterian church on Monday evening, April 22, has been specially honored by President Taft as his appointee at the head of the Children's Bureau in Washington. Her appointment meets with the cordial endorsement of all citizens interested in the welfare of children.

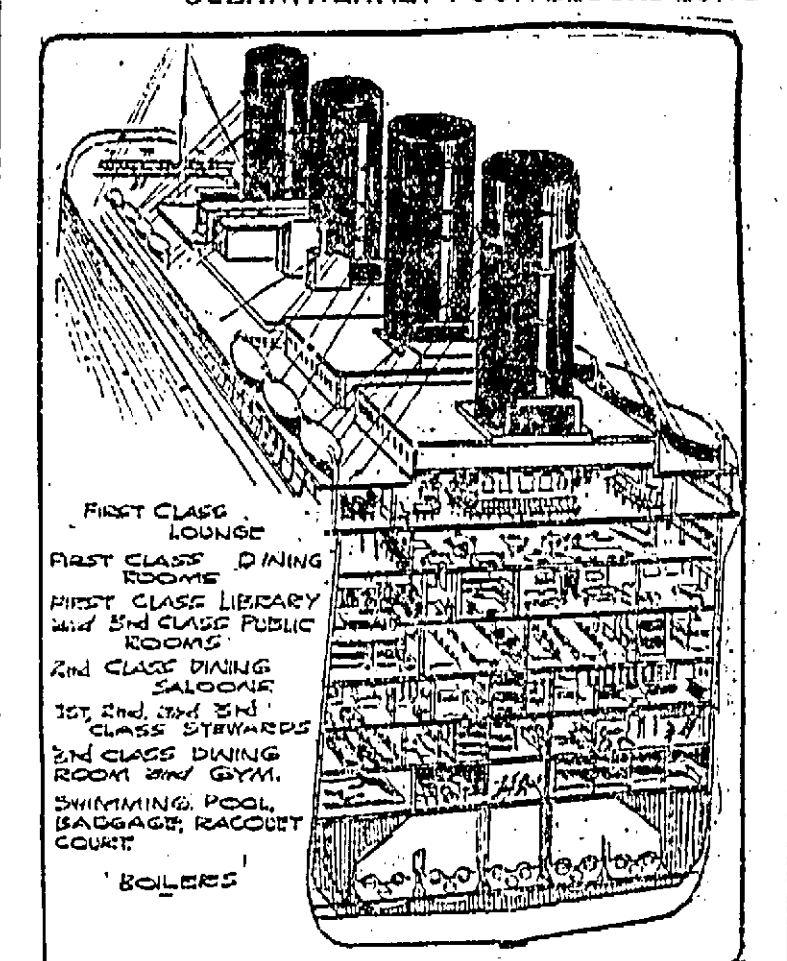

Miss Latrop has lectured before the Wisconsin State Teachers' association on former occasions and is well known to Wisconsin audiences. This is her first lecture in Janesville and she will undoubtedly be greeted by a large and representative audience.

CROSS SECTION OF TITANIC, QUEEN OF OCEAN, NEARLY FOUR BLOCKS LONG

"The forward end where we stood was sinking rapidly and before we could jump together the water washed father over. Then with the explosion the ship seemed to break in two and the forward end bounded up again for an instant. I leaped, but with dozens in the water between us, my father was lost to me.

"I swam and drifted nearly two hours before I was pulled aboard the raft or collapsible boat which served for a time as a raft. Later, with the abandonment of the raft, I was taken aboard a boat."

Frederick Seward, who sat next to W. T. Stead at the Titanic's saloon table, told the veteran English journalist's plans for his American visit. His immediate purpose was to aid in the New York campaign of the Men and Religion Forward movement.

Mr. Stead talked much of substitution, thought transference and the occult," said Seward. He told a story of a munimy case in the British museum which, he said, had had amazing adventures, but which punished with great calamities any person who wrote its story. He told of one person after another who, he said, had come to grief after writing the story and added that, although he knew it, he would never write it. He did not say whether immediate luck attached to the more telling of it."

Stead also told Seward said, of a strange adventure of a young woman with an admirer in an English railroad coach which was known to him as it happened, and which he afterwards related to the young woman, amazing her by repeating everything correctly save for one small detail.

Captain Hoston's rule that personal messages should take precedence of press messages was not realized even when Thursday a message from Giuseppe Marconi himself asked the reason why press dispatches were not sent. The captain posted Marconi's message on the bulletin board and beside it a bulletin stating that no press messages, except a bulletin to 'The Associated Press had been sent. The implication was that none would be sent and the most urgent and respectful appeals failed to change his determination which, he seemed convinced, was in the best interest of the survivors and their friends.

Now York, April 19.—A steward from the Carpathia told the story of the rescue of the Titanic's passengers and crew to a greatly interested group of his mates.

"It was between quarter after and half after one o'clock ship's true Monday morning," he said, "when all the stewards were muttering and Chief Steward Hughes told us that a wireless had just come in that the Titanic had hit an iceberg and probably would need help. He urged us to turn right in and get things ready for a ship's load of people. The Carpathia turned in the direction of the wireless had called from."

"We got hot coffee ready and laid out blankets and made sandwiches and everything like that. Captain Hoston shut off the hot water all over the ship and turned every ounce of heat into steam and the old boat was as excited as any of us."

"After we got things ready we went out on deck. It was a glorious morning, no swell in the sea, but bitter cold. The ship's lights were on full blaze and we were there in the middle of a sea of ice—the finest sight I ever saw."

"Just as it was about half day and dark we came upon a boat. There

PLAN IMPROVEMENTS FOR FIRE STATION

Important alterations in the central fire station, which will add to the efficiency of the department, provide more room for the apparatus, and more sanitary quarters for the men will be undertaken within a short time as the result of an inspection of the premises, made this morning by Mayor James A. Fathens and Councilmen Ray Cummings and C. K. Allington. The central alarm apparatus will be moved from its present quarters in the city hall to a room in the fire station; the stalls for the horses will be moved back; the sleeping quarters re-fitted; and much-needed repairs made.

The moving of the central alarm apparatus to the fire station is a change which will be heartily welcomed by Chief Kline. It will enable him to give it closer attention and save much time in making necessary repairs and adjustments. The work of moving the apparatus will be a difficult matter and will take some time. There are twenty wires radiating from it to all parts of the city and these will have to be changed so as to lead into the fire station. The storage batteries that energize the wires will have to be moved and a place convenient to the alarm apparatus. As the wires which arise from them are poisonous they will have to be partitioned off by themselves.

Much-needed room for the horse-wagons, trucks and other fire apparatus will be obtained by moving back the horse stalls. There is abundant room for them in the one-story annex at the rear, but when the station was equipped the stalls were put forward so as to provide hay room on the first floor. With the changes made the horses will be able to take their places in the harness even more quickly than at present.

The mayor and councilmen found the sleeping quarters of the firemen, the old city clerk's and city treasurer's office, in a very unsanitary and dilapidated condition. The rooms are located directly over the horses' stalls and the air very offensive and close. It will be necessary to re-finish the interior to put it in presentable condition. The front doors are also in bad shape. They are set in and they may have to be replaced.

Arrangements will be made to give each member of the council an office.

Mayor Fathens will occupy the room heretofore set aside for the mayor's use; Councilman Cummings will retain the quarters of the city clerk and treasurer, and Councilman Allington will occupy the room at the head of the first flight of stairs, where the fire alarm apparatus is housed.

SUGGESTIVE QUESTIONS

Club.

The Appointment of the Twelve.
Mark 11:7-10; Matt. 21:1-16.

Golden Text—Ye did not choose me,
but I chose you and appointed you,
that ye go and bear fruit. John 15:16.

(1.) Verse 7—Why, in view of what had just happened, did Jesus "withdraw himself and his disciples to the solitude?"

(2.) When is it right to flee from our enemies, and when is it duty to stand
our ground?

(3.) Verse 8—What proportion followed Jesus out of love for him, and his teaching, and what proportion through curiosity, and to see his wonderful works?

(4.) What proportion attend church
to-day for worship, for the preaching,
the music, or because it is the custom?

(5.) Verses 9-10—To what extent is it legitimate for a preacher in his public services to provide musical or other attractions in order to draw the crowd?

(6.) What would probably have been the size of the congregations of Jesus
if he had not performed miracles as well as preached the gospel?

(7.) Verses 11-12—If in these days a preacher is not instrumental in causing ancient spirits out of men, what ought he to do?

(8.) Why did Jesus charge the demons who knew him not to make him known?

(9.) Verse 13—Why is it, or not, a part of a pastor's duty to frequently invite individual Christians to visit him, with a view to finding out, and then to induce them to take up the work of Christian work for which they are fitted?

(10.) Verses 14-15—Jesus had a large following at this time. What method, therefore, did he adopt in selecting his twelve apostles?

(11.) What important preparation had Jesus made during the previous night for selecting his apostles? (See Luke 21:1-13.)

(12.) Which, and why, is the better method when faced with an important task, to seek help from God in a few words, and in faith leave the matter with him or to discuss all the details
with him in protracted prayer?

(13.) Back up your answer with reasonings and say whether Christ intended the miraculous power conferred upon the original twelve apostles to be permanent in the Christian church. (This is one of the questions which may be answered in writing by members of the club.)

(14.) If a man secretly plans a murder and lacks the opportunity of committing it he is innocent at law. Would you say that he is just as guilty
before God as if he had committed it? Why?

(15.) Does Christ teach that wicked anger or hatred is regarded by God
as murder, and, if not, what does he mean? (See 1 John 3:15.)

(16.) What does Jesus here mean by the various degrees of punishment represented by the "judgment," the
"council," and "hell fire?"

(17.) Verses 23-25—Why is it impossible to worship or be in harmony with God if we bear a grudge against any person?

Lesson for Sunday, May 20, 1912.
Truthfulness, Matt. 23:37; Jas. 1:11-12; v. 12.

What Say the Scriptures?

The Bible presentation of this subject is every way reasonable, consistent and harmonious. St. Paul points out that "There is a natural body and there is a spirit body." He does not mean, and he does not say, that the spirit body is a human-body glorified.
Quite to the contrary. He declares that "flesh and blood cannot inherit the Kingdom of God"—no matter how glorified it might be. A human being would be so totally different from a spirit being that, as St. Paul says, "It doth not yet appear what we shall be."
—In our change—and the Scriptures do not even attempt to give an explanation.

The Bible merely declares that as we now bear the image of the earthly (Adam), we shall, by the glorious resurrection change, be given a share in the nature and likeness of the Second Adam, our glorious Lord: "We shall be like Him, and see Him as He is"— and, be it noted, we must change from flesh and blood conditions to spirit conditions by resurrection power, in order that we may see Him as He is.

He Appeared and Disappeared.

Two lines of difficulties now present themselves, one of which can be answered, and the other cannot. The unanswerable difficulty is where a natural minded man undertakes to reason the subject out. St. Paul explains this, saying, "The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God, neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned."

The Apostle proceeds (verses 26-50)
to tell us that all men are natural men, except such as have been begotten by the Holy Spirit. All natural men will,
in their resurrection, receive earthly or
human bodies, while all spiritual ones,
New Creatures in Christ, will receive spirit bodies.

Coming to the point of what is to be resurrected, we note that our Lord appeared in a body of flesh, and showed the disciples the print of the nails and the hole made by the spear. But we, perhaps, failed to note that only twice did He thus appear, and but for a few moments each time. The other six or seven appearances during that forty days were also very brief, and in various bodies—once as a gardener, another time as a traveler, the third time as a stranger on the shore, and to Saul of Tarsus as a spirit being of more than angelic brightness—"shining above the brightness of the sun at noonday."

Now we see more distinctly why our Lord did as He did. His disciples were natural men and therefore could not apprehend spiritual things. The Lord adopted the only reasonable way of helping them to understand that He was no longer dead—that He had risen from the dead.

RELATIVES OF PASSENGERS ON LOST SHIP THROG STREETS IN FRONT OF WHITE STAR LINE OFFICES AWAITING NEWS

Large Photograph shows street in front of White Star Line offices. Insert shows relatives of passengers leaving office after making inquiries.

Ever since the first news of the Titanic disaster was flashed to New York on the night of April 15, the streets in front of the White Star Line offices in the metropolis have been thronged with anxious relatives and friends of passengers on the lost ship, awaiting news from the missing vessel, or from any source that would reveal the fate of their loved ones. The above photograph shows the automobiles of relatives of those aboard the lost ship, drawn up outside the White Star Line office.

THE THEATERS

MUTT AND JEFF.

"Mutt and Jeff," which will be the attraction at the Myers Theater Saturday April 27 Mat. and evening. It described as one of the funniest plays ever written. It is a dramatization of the cartoons of Bud Fisher of the same name, which have been attracting the attention of the entire country for the last year or so. This new play was constructed by Gus Hill, the well known New York producer, who has spared no expense or time to make it one of the best musical comedies ever seen on the stage. The play is described as a musical comedy of a very high order, containing a laugh in every tick of the clock, and to be filled with all the laugh provoking situations the public has been led to expect. Fisher's "brain people" present very broad opportunities for a play of more than ordinary interest, and no lack of grasping these opportunities will be found when the play visits this city for the first time. More than fifty people will be cast in the production including a chorus of the prettiest girls a big city has to offer. The antics of "Mutt and Jeff," while the object of interest, they will not be missed when not on the stage, as the play has been constructed so as to be sufficiently interesting without have-ing to depend entirely on these two funny fellows. The best and most famous theatrical mechanics have been busy for months on the scenic production, which will rival in beauty anything that Broadway has seen in years. Frank Hayden had several hundred people working night and day on the costumes, which are from the original designs furnished by A. Delol, of Paris.

"Mutt and Jeff" is a little bit on the order of "Little Johnny Jones", but will be presented on a much more elaborate scale.

Royal Way to Success.

Get the right thing—that is, the occupation you like—and then, focus the best of your powers on it. Not once, but all the time. That is how others have done it. It is the only royal way.

If you would be a better batter—a great one, like Ty Cobb or Frank Schulte or Russ Wagner—you can turn the trick with a moderate amount of the right kind of confidence.

That's all it requires according to some of our leading bingers who have been talking for the papers, Frank Baker, the Athletic champion writer of home runs, wrote the other day for one of the Philadelphia newspapers, in which he was giving full and complete instructions to Young America as to the best method of knocking the cover off the ball, that any batter who "milled" away from the plate when the pitcher began to snake out over had better quit right there. You've got to have the confidence that will get you the hit.

"When fans ask me the secret of my success last year," says Schulte of the Cubs, "I tell 'em in just one word. It's confidence. I was the leading home run getter of the National league last year."

Sam Crawford's miserable batting record last season has led him to use a heavier stick this year in a desire to improve. He only hit .378.

They have the investigation buzz down at Washington. Congress spent quite a lot of time and money investigating to find out how Lorimer and Stephenson became senators, and how some of the District of Columbia municipalities are talking of starting an investigation to find out how some of the Senators became Senators.

I'm a great believer in loyalty to one's family. It's fine to see a young man, who has made good passing shows of prosperity around among his kindred. But Joe McGinnity, veteran Giant pitcher, who is now president of the Newark, N. J. club of the International league seems to have carried it to an extreme. Joe sure is good to relatives. He has appointed his brother watchman at the park, and his brother-in-law, sister-in-law, and Mrs. McGinnity, his wife, are drawing salaries from the club for various duties. Besides being president of the club, Joe is president and its majesty in the box.

"I'll tell you one instance," continued Schulte. "Christy Mathewson is regarded as one of the hardest pitchers in the business to hit, and he is. Joe Tinker, though, our short stop, can climb onto Christy's bench as though Mattie was the greenest kind of a recruit. How does he do it? Confidence; that's all. It goes up to bat with only one thought in his mind, 'I can hit that fellow,' and he doesn't often fail. It is said Mattie would rather face an entire team of sluggers than Joe Tinker alone."

Prisoners in the Leavenworth penitentiary have formed a baseball league.

It is said that they play great inside ball.

The loser's end of the purse was $53.00. Jack says he wouldn't do it again for a hundred times as much.
